FRENCH READY TO INVADE MOROCCO

2 Navies Join In New Crisis

Europe's War Clouds Gather

PARIS—French prepare virtual ultimatum to Spanish Insurgents, demanding the evacuation of German troops from Spanish Morocco. Eighty French war planes "ready" in Casablanca. British and French fleets combine.

PARIS—Eighteen more American airmen are still fighting in Spain, but under assumed names.

LONDON—Great Britain makes fresh demand that five powers unite to block all further movements of volunteers or war supplies into Spain. Four British admirals confer in Gibraltar.

BERLIN—Nazi dispatches state Hitler is convinced France seeks to provoke war in Morocco and is determined to oppose any French advancement in Africa.

MADRID—Thousands flee in evacuation of capital as siege is renewed with bombardment. German troops mowed down in fighting. Loyalist headquarters claim.

Paris, Jan. 11 (AP)—France drafted a second and stronger warning to Spanish Fascists today to ban Nazis from Spanish Morocco while the army general staff was reported completing plans for a speedy invasion of the North African territory.

A source close to the foreign office said a new note was ready for delivery to the Spanish insurgent high commissioner at Tetuan, Spanish Morocco, declaring explicitly that landing of large bodies of German troops would be the signal for French invasion of the Spanish zone.

(Officials in Berlin denied knowledge of the reported German infiltration and the press counter-charged in big headlines "Secret Intention of French General Staff!")

Mother Warns Duke of Kent

London, Jan. 11 (INS)—A gentle reminder to holds a public position which renders its advisable for him to do nothing that might attract unfavorable publicity was understood given to the Duke of Kent by Queen Mary over the week-end at Sandringham House, it was learned today.

Queen Mary was pictured as perturbed over the attention given to the London Press to the Duke's visit to a phrenologist in company with Mrs. William Aiken, the former Paula Gellibrand, once a showgirl.

790 MILLION WPA FUND ASKED

Washington, Jan. 11 (INS)—President Roosevelt today asked Congress for a deficiency appropriation of $790,000,000 to carry Works Progress Administration and related projects through from Feb. 1 to June 30.

In a letter to Speaker Bankhead the President estimated that 2,250,000 unemployed would have to be taken care of during the winter months by WPA.

He pointed out that this was a net reduction of more than 800,000 since last March.

Last year's drouth was the unforeseen factor which upset the administration's relief calculations, the President reported.

In general, the President's letter was optimistic. He said that at the beginning of the winter at least 4,000,000 more workers were employed by non-agricultural jobs than in March, 1933—3,000,000 of whom saving found jobs with private industry during the past year.

PREDICTS FURTHER CUT

He predicted that further reductions would be made this spring and summer in relief rolls.

Industry in the main has cooperated, Mr. Roosevelt advised Congress, but some employers "since the demise of the National Recovery Act, are working their employes unreasonably long hours." In September, 1934, the average working week was 33.3 hours, but it jumped 20 per cent to more than 40 hours in October, 1936.

Tragedy Victims

Marie Hucul, 22, of New Haven, and Frank Kroupa, 22, of Hampden, Conn., victims of carbon monoxide poisoning. Police suspect foul play, claiming the couple was gassed to death and then driven to where the car was discovered with its grisly burden. A rejected suitor is being sought for questioning.

HUNT SPURNED SUITOR IN AUTO GAS DEATHS

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 11—Murder's grim spectre peered today from a quiet, under cover probe of a double death case, during which it was learned, a Yale professor used himself in a laboratory experiment.

Poised in the probe are Professor Tindall Henderson of Yale and Jane Mulcahy, youthful state trooper and student of J. Edgar Hoover's Federal crime school.

As an outcome of their joint investigation, Boston and New York police were asked today to aid in a search for "a swarthy man of 30," identified only as "Joe" and said to be a rejected suitor of Marie Hucul, 22, a night club entertainer.

FOUND DEAD IN AUTO

Miss Hucul and Frank Kroupa, 22, of Hamden, were found dead January 2 beside the Boston Post road in Guilford, several miles from here. They were seated in Kroupa's car and their deaths were ascribed to carbon monoxide poisoning.

Today it was declared, both by Professor Henderson and Trooper Mulcahy, that they believed the couple had died elsewhere and the bodies were driven to Guilford and abandoned.

In his "laboratory experiment," Professor Henderson sat in the Kroupa car for half an hour, with windows closed, declared afterward

Brann Admitted To Claims Court

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—Former Governor Louis J. Brann of Maine was admitted to practice today before the United States Court of Claims.

Afterwards, he called at the White House executive offices but did not see President Roosevelt. He planned to attend a reception at the White House tomorrow evening.

BOY 'HOUDINI' IS FOILED IN ESCAPE TRY

An 18-year-old East Boston youth, known to police as the "boy Houdini," made a desperate but futile bid for freedom in Middlesex superior court today shortly after he was sentenced to five to seven years in state prison on a charge of armed robbery.

He is Croce Centofante of Frankfort street, who during the past three years has made a series of escapes from the law only to be captured later.

Subdued after a terrible struggle with Deputy Sheriff Loring E. Kew, the courtroom was thrown into an uproar.

KICKS GUN OUT OF REACH

During the melee, Kew's gun slipped from the holster. Centofante made a grab for the weapon, but Kew kicked it out of reach just in time.

Five other men in the prisoners' cage, where the tussle occurred, stood huddled in the corner, watching the two roll on the floor. Other court officers surrounded the cage to prevent an escape until Kew pinned the youth.

Kew had gone into the cage to take Centofante across the street to the House of Correction, where he was to be held until removal to State Prison, when the youth resisted.

The court officer gripped one of the youth's coat sleeves, when the latter pulled back and snarled:

"Keep your hands off me."

Then with his free hand he started to swing punches at Kew, one landing on the latter's eye. With a flying tackle Kew threw Centofante to the floor of the prisoner's

Auto Strike Chief Flies to Capitol For Lewis Talk

Detroit, Jan. 11 (INS)—As Homer Martin, head of the United Auto Workers Union, announced here he was flying to Washington to confer with John L. Lewis, head of the committee for industrial organization, trouble broke on a General Motors front in nearby Pontiac when five men were ejected from the Pontiac Motor Company plant.

The union men claimed they were on their way out of the plant after

Hurley Fires 75 in Shakeup

Seventy-five employes of the State Banking Department, including 14 lawyers, most of them associates of former Governor Curley, were discharged today on order of Governor Charles F. Hurley.

All 75 were employed on the liquidation of closed banks, in connection with which Hurley claims too many persons were awarded jobs last year.

Some of the lawyers will be replaced, Hurley stated, he made it clear the staff would be considerably smaller than it has been.

Besides the lawyers, those "fired" were clerks, stenographers, examiners and real estate appraisers.

Lawyers Ousted As Liquidators

Lawyers dropped from the liquidating division of the State Banking Department by Governor Hurley today were:

HENRY C. ROWLAND, salary $600.
EDWARD C. MADDEN, $2600.
CHARLES H. McCUE, $2000.
WILLIAM H. MELLEY, $2000.
ARTHUR J. UDELE, $4000.
CHARLES F. HILLEY, $2500.

All are connected with the central office at the State House.

LOUIS F. ELEY, Bancroft Trust Co., Worcester, $4500.
EDWARD D. HASSAN, Belmont Trust Co., $4000.
MICHAEL BATAL, Medford Trust Co., $2500.
JOHN T. O'NEILL, Plymouth Country Trust Company of Brockton, $4000.
GEORGE COHEN, Highland Trust Co., Somerville, $2000.
ISRAEL RUBY, Inman Trust Co., Cambridge, $2500.
MICHAEL BATAL, Medford Trust Co., $2500.
ROBERT H. CURRAN, Waltham Trust Co., $2500.

Earlier today Dr. Carl F. Maraldi of 276 Commonwealth avenue, one of Governor Hurley's six civilian aides, resigned in protest over Hurley's displacement of Joseph A. Scolponeti as chief liquidation counsel. Scolponeti resigned last week.

RESCINDS HOSPITAL ACTION

The Governor also rescinded the action of ex-Governor Curley in arranging the state hospital trustees of their powers and giving them to Dr. David Williams, new commissioner of mental diseases. Hurley restored the powers to the trustees.

In another act involving the former Governor, Hurley asked Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin to design him a new set of S-1 plates for his official car.

"It is the custom to reserve S-1 and S-2 for the Governor," said Hurley.

"I understand, however, and confirmation has been given me by the motor vehicle division

Pain Grips Pope; Pontiff Has His 'Worst Night'

Vatican City, Jan. 11 (INS)—Dr. Amanti Milani, Pope Pius' personal physician, was summoned to the Vatican hall an hour ahead of schedule today when the Pontiff was seized with a second, unexpectedly intense pain in the upper part of his shrunken right leg.

The Pope's condition again became perilously critical after one of the worst nights he has spent in recent weeks, it was learned. Vatican circles now fear his paralysis is creeping toward his heart.

The Pope immediately was given an injection of insulin to take the strain off his weakened heart, and also took a sedative by mouth.

The Holy Father's heart-beat dropped to 40 and fluttered dangerously for some time before he could be aided.

PARIS DRAFTS NEW WAR NOTE; TWO FLEETS COMBINE

80 FRENCH PLANES SWARM TO MOROCCO 'FOR SERVICE'

Assassination of Spanish Morocco Premier.

While the international atmosphere already troubled by the Spanish civil war, was clouded further by the German press attacks on France, cabinet ministers cut short their vacations and rushed to the capital.

PLAN QUICK INVASION

The new note, it was said again would call attention to the new barracks at Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, and warn that, if they were filled with Nazis, French Moroccan troops would immediately move to assist the Government.

Under the secret staff plans, it was reported, the Spanish zone would be overrun in a lightning invasion manoeuver of land, sea and air forces.

Additional reports were received on the morale in the Moroccan garrison already swollen from abroad by the influx of powerful army of regulars, Foreign Legionnaires and Moors.

Extraordinary activity has been reported in the air force. It was known at least 80 planes have been flown from France to Morocco in the last fortnight.

HUGE FLEETS COMBINE

The combined British and French fleets were massing off the Moroccan coast, prepared "if needed" to aid in the expulsion.

South Africa indicated, should safety not the first opera- tions against French troops being called from the homeland to garrison French Morocco.

Bulletins

London, Jan. 11 (INS)—The Communist party of France has recruited 48,150 men for the Spanish Loyalists, the London Daily Mail claimed today in a Paris dispatch.

Paris, Jan. 11 (INS)—A story published in the United States alleging France-British plans to occupy Spanish Morocco was ridiculed as "childish" by the French Foreign office today.

Berlin, Jan. 11 (INS)—A violent German press attack upon France was launched today as influential editorial writers accused the French of plotting to seize Spanish Morocco. Devoting almost their entire front pages to the Moroccan crisis, the afternoon papers accused France of the very things Paris has laid at Berlin's door.

London, Jan. 11 (AP)—Ninety British warships and 15,000 regular army troops have been concentrated in strategic positions near Spain, official sources disclosed today. British troop strength is divided roughly as follows: Gibraltar, 3650 men; Malta, 3500; Egypt, 9000.

Government quarters expressed fears a campaign in the German press presaged not only a delay in enforcement of any ban on volunteers for Spain, but a possible new coup by Reichschancellor Hitler.

4 British Admirals, Army Chief Parley in Gibraltar

London, Jan. 11 (AP)—Four of the highest ranking admirals of Britain's fleet, with the governor of Gibraltar, it was learned today, in absence of the meeting of their fleets and the Spanish and Moroccan fronts are near.

Adding to the importance of the conference was the presence of one of Britain's foremost soldiers, Sir Cyril Deverell, Chief of Imperial General Staff, whose recent visit to the east is a discussion attempt to keep Spain's civil war within the peninsula.

England, tensed as tourists had on enlistment of her soldiers and sailors and dispatch of a new note to five principal powers asking them to respect neutrality.

The British note, sent to six ambassadors at Berlin, Rome, Moscow, Paris, Lisbon, London, urging the stoppage of volunteers to Spain, without waiting for the unanimous reply of the non-intervention committee.

French Mass Vast Army; Morocco Denies Invasion

Casablanca, French Morocco, Jan. 11 (AP)—Reports that French troops in the northern Moroccan zone today for ceremonial drill showed no mind to be called necessary, to repel German invasion in West Africa.

The troops were assembled at Meknes, in the interior at French Morocco and on the strategic railroad connecting the capital at Rabat with Casablanca and other west coast ports.

The declaration of J. Beigbeder y Atienza, insurgent high commissioner of Spanish Morocco, that there were no troops in his territory was interpreted as an intimation his reply to France's note would be only German infiltration or military operations.

Acting on reports that Nazi troops already have been stationed in Spanish Morocco, others were expected and strong fortifications had been erected, it was notified Spanish French leaders say German invasion of Morocco would be resisted forcibly.

Beigbeder spoke in the presence of the French consul at Tetuan. It was said their relations were cordial, but authoritative sources expressed the view a more official version of the reports would not satisfy the French.

Although disorders there are no German troops in Morocco and no intended movements into the zone probably would be demanded, they said.

Goering Going to Rome On "Important Mission"

Berlin, Jan. 11 (AP)—Colonel-General Hermann Wilhelm Goering, highest Nazi official next to Hitler, will leave for Rome tomorrow on what diplomatic circles believe is an "important mission" in connection with the Spanish crisis.

Plans for General Goering's trip were disclosed after Herr Fuehrer had re-nominated Germany's delegate to the international body to prepare "international understanding among peoples" during a reception for the diplomatic corps.

Naval Chiefs Confer On Morocco Crisis

London, Jan. 11 (AP)—Britain's highest naval chieftains were summoned to the foreign office to discuss Spanish situation today as the government was reported to have received information of "certain aspects of German activity" in Spanish Morocco.

Spain Charges Hitler Lands 8000 in Morocco

Paris, Jan. 11 (INS)—Eight thousand German officers and soldiers, exclusive of engineers who have been building the Spanish Morocco base below the Spanish embassy were alleged today.

Reports that 10,000 Germans are fighting on the battlefront at Madrid it was charged.

A total of 20,000 Germans have been landed at Cadiz since the civil war broke out, the embassy declared. Italy was accused of sending at least 6000 men to the war.

RUSSIA BOOSTS WAR BUDGET

Moscow, Jan. 11 (AP)—Russia set up a 34,000,000,000 war budget today, boosting her defense estimate for 1937 more than $1,000,000,000 over last year's.

Gregory Grinko, commissar for finance, announced the war budget would be 29,102,000,000 rubles ($14,024,400,000), an increase of more than $,000,000,000 rubles over the 1936 expenditures.

Grinko estimated the 1937 income for the government would approximate 80,000,000,000 rubles ($18,600,000,000), or about 14,800,000,000 rubles higher than in 1936.

The 1936 military budget was 14,-815,000,000 rubles ($2,962,000,000).

Anniversary

Montgomery City, Mo., Jan. 11 (AP)—Twenty years ago Joe Covington was elected sheriff of Montgomery county. His first prisoner was Nat Motley, a Negro.

This year Covington again was elected sheriff. His second term began January 1, 1937. His first prisoner—you guessed it —was Nat.

18 AMERICAN WAR FLIERS FIGHTING IN SPAIN

By HUGO SPECK

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service.

Paris, Jan. 11 (US)—At least 18 American fliers are still fighting in Spain's Socialist-Communist air force, Universal Service is able to reveal today.

Details of the presence of 12 of these airmen in Spain and disclosure that six others have joined the Spanish government air corps were obtained from an unimpeachable source here.

This was learned despite the belief that only one or possibly two American fliers were still fighting in Spain following the recent departure of Bert Acosta, noted American trans-Atlantic ace, and four flying companions.

LIST OF NAMES

Acosta recently left Spain after serving for a month with the government air force. His four companions who also departed were Major Frederick Loel, formerly a United States marine aviator; Major Gordon Berry, formerly an American army flier; Captain Eddie Schneider, holder of aged records; and Hal Du Berrier, a Chicago aviator.

Following their departure, the American fliers who still remained with the Spanish air force and are presently engaged in the fighting include:

Major Thomas G. Lamphier, former commander of Selfridge Field, Mich., army air base at Detroit and one of America's famous aviators during the post-war period. He attained world distinction as an air ace during the World War and resigned his army post in 1928 to become a pioneer in commercial air transportation in the United States.

OTHERS ON LIST

Lieutenant William C. Allison, formerly of the U. S. Naval Reserve air base, at Floyd Bennett Field, New York; Eddie Simons, New York aviator who worked as a test pilot at Roosevelt Field; Charley Koch, former test pilot for the Keyzkbe Aircraft Co., of Philadelphia, a two-place defiant; Curtis Wright subsidiary; O. D. Bell, of New York who had his major aviation training as a member of the British Royal Air Corps.

Others included Vincent Schmidt, Sam Shapiro, F. Neild, Ira Bushnell, and three men whose last names are Dahl, Rousaix and Lyons. The last two were accompanied to Spain by six other Americans whose names are undetermined.

Difficulty in obtaining full names and other details of the American fliers still in Spain was exhausted by the reluctance of flying under assumed names and the refusal of Spanish authorities to divulge any information concerning them.

Nevertheless, it was definitely learned here that the 18 Americans mentioned are still in action with the Spanish government aviation branch, and that there may be possibly more Americans in Spain.

Expenses in bringing them from the United States to Spain were covered by New York Communists who provided the necessary funds.

SUSPECTS HELD IN $20,000

Two men, arrested by Waltham and state police who charged that the suspects were members of a "half million dollar warehouse ring," were arraigned in Waltham district court today and were held in $10,000 each for the grand jury.

They were Frank Gettings, 36, of Pinling street, Roxbury, and Sylvester Banfield, 26, of Hill street, Charlestown.

They were charged with breaking and entering and larceny in connection with the looting of $7,500 worth of liquor from the Rye-Whiskey warehouse, Charles street, Waltham, on December 8.

'Showdown Battle' In Auto Strike War

quitting, and were set upon by company guards. One was injured.

The new company said that men started a sit-down strike, and were forcibly ejected by fellow workers.

There was no general disturbance at any of the three General Motors plants at Pontiac—Pontiac Motor, Fisher Body and General Motors Truck—after the incident involving the five men, although one company official was petitioned for police protection going to and from the plant.

The seven union men at Pontiac Motors went home after telling their foreman they no longer wanted to work. At the General Motors Truck plant, it was reported 20 went home.

Martin, who said he was leaving for Washington at 1:30 p. m. to confer with John L. Lewis tonight, declined comment on reports he would confer with government officials and planned direct appeal to President Roosevelt to intervene.

Accompanying him was John Bropny, head of the committee for organizing negro labor, headed by Lewis. The CIO is behind the union in its battle against General Motors.

Reports Homer Martin, bespectacled 34-year-old head of the UAW, would appeal directly to President Roosevelt to take a hand were given credence today by Martin's refusal to become president of the Merchants Co-Operative Bank of Boston, largest bank of its kind in the nation. His acceptance, it is understood, will be John Lacey Delaney of Cambridge.

In that capacity, it is reported, dealers are watching developments closely, due to a rumor that if a sit-down strike closes one of the closed banks, Governor Hurley will have many of the banks reopened progressively. The market is said to be favorable now for liquidation.

Pierce Expected To Quit Bank Job

Bank Commissioner Henry H. Pierce is expected to resign the end of this week to become president of the Merchants Co-Operative Bank of Boston, largest bank of its kind in the nation. His acceptance, it is understood, will be John Lacey Delaney of Cambridge.

In that capacity, it is reported, dealers are watching developments closely, due to a rumor that if a sit-down strike closes one of the closed banks, Governor Hurley will have many of the banks reopened progressively. The market is said to be favorable now for liquidation.

Striking Seamen Capitol Pickets

Baltimore, Jan. 11 (AP)—A half-dozen of Baltimore's striking seamen went to Washington today to join representatives from other nearby ports in demonstration at the Department of Commerce building.

The six men, headed by William Tatham, planned to carry placards in the Commerce Department offices. Similar groups from other ports were expected to be in the march.

Local seamen said they would take part in a mass picketing of the Capitol in Washington 10 days from now.

NEW DEAL WINS AGAIN

50 P.C. Silver Tax Held Legal

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—The Administration today won its third victory this term in the Supreme Court.

By unanimous vote the tribunal held constitutional a 50 per cent tax on profits made by silver traders before enactment of the 1934 law directing the Treasury to increase its purchases of that metal for the nation's monetary stock.

The decision undoubtedly was agreed upon, however, before President Roosevelt delivered his message to Congress last week calling for more liberal interpretation of the Constitution.

Other decisions favorable to the Administration since the present term started last October included an embargo on shipment of arms to Bolivia and Paraguay for their Chaco war and the Ashurst-Sumner Act prohibiting shipment of prison-made goods into states that bar their sale.

The court announced also that it would take a recess next Monday to the following Wednesday when it will attend in a body the inauguration of President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner.

Justice Van Devanter delivered the silver decision. He reversed a ruling by the court of claims that the tax was unconstitutional because it took properly without due process of law.

Percy K. Hudson of New York challenged the act, contending it was unconstitutional and retroactively applied.

The court asserted the period of retroactivity was not unreasonable.

Only one decision was delivered today.

SCOTT CLASSIC NEW OFFER

"Ivanhoe," Sir Walter Scott's immortal novel of England in the days of the Crusades and Richard the Lion Hearted, is the book which will be made available at the end of this week to the thousands participating in the Book-a-Week program of the Boston Evening American.

Millions of school children have thrilled to the drama and thrills of Scott's tale of old England and while few have found the volume tiresome in its graphic description of conditions and customs of the time.

This classic in literature will be ready for presentation to Boston Evening American readers next Saturday in the same way in which six volumes of the 20-book library have already been presented.

The conditions are the same. Read the directions with the coupon printed here concerning the six consecutively numbered coupons and the fee which makes you elect to receive this volume as an addition to your library.

U. S. Charter Given Waltham Bank

The preliminary application of the Waltham Co-operative Bank for a Federal Savings and Loan Association charter was approved today by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Washington.

With assets of $6,279,000, the institution will be the largest federal and loan association in Greater Boston.

The bank, organized in 1890, has assisted in financing more than half the homes in Waltham, it is stated.

Its present shareholders number 5750 and it holds 1600 home mortgages totaling $5,350,000.

As a federal association, the savings accounts of the shareholders will be insured up to $5000 each.

Dorothy Gish Forfeits Bail

Westport, Conn., Jan. 11 (INS)—Dorothy Gish, actress and former screen star, forfeited a court bond of $10 when she failed to appear in court today to answer a charge of speeding.

She was arrested here last August, posting a bond of $25 which the court was reduced to $10, ordinary court costs, when she was granted a later continuance.

Thousands Fleeing Madrid; Germans Suffer Big Loss

Madrid, Jan. 11 (AP)—Spanish armies of siege and defense rushed up ammunition and supplies under cover of extended fog today in preparation for a new and bitter Fascist onslaught on Madrid.

Under urgent orders, virtually the entire non-combatant population of the capital began to evacuate the city.

Madrid's defense command speeded a 24-hour evacuation of 2500 non-combatants to the south and announced 11 Fascist deserters had related that one insurgent general ordered 15,000 persons shot in the first six months of the civil war.

The 2500 women, children and old men were the first group allotted in the new order to empty Madrid of all but fighters and make it a military citadel of steel. Their destination was Ciudad Real province.

TELLS OF EXECUTIONS

From the Cordoba high command, in the south, came the two deserters stories. It was General Gonzalo Queipo de Llano, Fascist southern commander, who ordered the 15,000 executions, they were quoted as saying.

They said also that while battalions of German troops, completely equipped with supplies, ammunition, fast motorcycles, trucks and motor cars, had joined the insurgents at Seville.

Only men operating public services and their families were exempted from the drastic decree of the defense junta commanding the population to seek places of safety outside the war zone.

ENEMY AT CITY'S GATES

The decision to empty the city of non-combatants apparently was a desperate measure in anticipation of an imminent onslaught by Gen. Francisco Franco's insurgents against the defenses which have resisted 11 weeks of siege.

It was broadcast over the thunder of artillery fire almost at the city's edges. There were no decisive results.

HEAVY GERMAN LOSSES

General Jose Miaja, defense commandant, announced casualties in the heavy fighting of the past week probably would reach 4000. He said the ranks of German troops fighting with the Fascists were thinned considerably because of their tactics of charging in close formation.

Socialist machine gunners, General Miaja declared, cut down wave after wave of insurgents, mainly Germans, at Arganda.

(Insurgent officers estimated Socialist losses on the Madrid front in the past week at nearly 4000 men, including 1200 killed.)

They said the defense strength was unabated, mainly by heavy losses in battle but also by desertions. A thousand Socialists, they said, crossed to the insurgent ranks during the week.)

Rebels Charge Reds Bombed British Embassy

Lisbon, Jan. 11 (AP)—General Gonzalo Queipo de Llano, Spanish Fascist commander, charged today that government airplanes, not insurgent bombers, had attacked the British embassy in Madrid last Friday night.

Two British subjects were injured in the raid, and London has protested to the insurgents.

General Queipo said he hoped the government air force had bombed the mission to provoke British ire against the insurgents.

Italy Says War Crisis "Up to France, Russia"

Rome, Jan. 11 (AP) — Italian government sources insisted today the question of nonintervention in Spain is "up to France and Russia."

Declining to comment directly on a new British note urging cessation of hostilities, said to fully informed sources said the government was confident that Britain, and Germany as well, were sincerely anxious to join in withholding every form of outside help from either fighting side.

Italy, however, remained adamant that the French frontier be closed completely to men or arms destined for the Spanish government, and that all Soviet Russian activity in connection with Spain cease forthwith.

Harvard Tests Start

Science Fights Flu With Floodlights

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

A new ultra-violet floodlight which promises to curb flu, the common colds of winter indoors and more dangerous air-born diseases was set up today for "field" tests on human beings.

The light was developed at the Harvard School of Public Health by William F. and M. F. Wells. He tells its virtue and other disease bacteria.

It was tested today in a switched on for the first time using in a "barrage" of invisible light across the middle of a room occupied by The barrage divides the infection droplets of sneezes and the like. Today's experiments are being made to determine exactly against what germs the light will work, and under what conditions. They are also making a special study of the sterilizing powers of the air by floodlight.

Dr. Francis Gilman Blake, health work-ers Mr. and Mrs. Wells are adding to their knowledge on the methods of dealing with the air of two infectious diseases, an "infectious" and a "measles."

When the experiments have been completed, specified flats of dark rooms, known to harbor germs of the diseases, will be subjected to the floodlight treatment.

In Babies' Room

In a third eastern city the lights now will be placed in a hospital nursery room where the air is also above the infants' cribs and the nurses without touching the germ-laden air of the room.

In another city a corner of a ward has been fitted with a light which will be used in the event of a disaster. Then, if an epidemic of flu or cold starts among the passengers or wounded, the light will be turned on at once and passengers, if unhealthy, can be isolated.

All these experiments, the Harvard School of Public Health has been conducting for the past year. Its laboratories have been fitted with floodlights which are said to kill germs in the air almost as well as the sun's rays. Ordinary glass absorbs the ultra-violet rays which are the germ killers, so the floodlights are fitted with quartz glass through which the rays pass freely.

Goal in Battle

The Harvard goal is not only to find out just how much good the light can do, but also to find out if it does any harm. It is known that it can cause sunburn, but it is not known if it can cause other ailments.

Dr. Wells explained that the light is not a cure-all. It is not expected to prevent all colds, but only those which are caught from the air. Colds caught from contact with other persons, or from contaminated food or drink, will not be affected.

"Control of Air"

"The way the first definite proof of the practical value of the air control will have been obtained," he said, "it will be a great step forward in the control of air-borne infection rather than the

Brockton, Malden, Watertown Fire Loss $60,000

Three fires in Watertown, Brockton and Malden today caused damage estimated at more than $60,000.

On Main st. no. 30 Malden, where an apartment in a one and a half story wooden auto dwelling was destroyed by flames. Two others below the living quarters suffered water damage.

The house is more than 200 years old, was the last remaining landmark in the square. Miss Margaret McDonald, its owner, donated it to the ground to enlarge the Hamlet Memorial Park, and had planned to raze the house this week.

In Brockton a two-alarm fire swept through the automobile Commercial Garage, causing damage estimated at $50,000. The fire started in a room adjoining the bowling alley on the basement and spread to the roof.

Several of the members who had rushed to the scene, including W. R. Chisholm, president of the club, dashed into the burning building in an effort to save the bowling equipment, including bowling balls.

After a hard battle, firemen brought the blaze under control in a short time. Mayor Alphonse Murzi, Watertown gasoline station attendant, suffered [illegible] while [illegible] the flames.

The pianist was Francis Parker, 47. His brother, Murray, looked at the body last night and said:

RICHES To Dole, Her PATH

EX-SOCIALITE DIES IN SHACK

The colorful story of Mrs. Margaret Bruce McLain Hughes—a story of Beacon Hill and the Klondike gold rush, of wealth and the dole, of fair-weather friends and a lonely death—was revealed today by her daughter.

The former Boston woman was found dead in a shack in Sarasota, Fla. surrounded by dogs, one of which remained faithful to his mistress [illegible] death. Police had to shoot the animal to get at the body.

On a chicken farm in the woods at South Weymouth, her daughter was found today as she prepared to leave for Florida to bury her once-wealthy mother.

The South Weymouth woman is Miss Pearl Tupper, 37, who played in many silent motion pictures, some of them feature films like the "Hunchback of Notre Dame."

Mining Deeds

Miss Tupper does not believe [illegible] found in the Florida shack are very valuable. Her mother was [illegible] on relief. Of [illegible] worth are deeds to copper mining property in Arizona and a gold mine in Alaska.

"My mother was married three times," said Miss Tupper. "She was the daughter of a wealthy Beacon Hill family, the McLains, and has two brothers living, one a wealthy resident of Portsmouth, N. H., and the other a doctor in San Francisco.

"She first married my father, Frank Tupper, with whom I am now living here and who is helping me make the trip to Florida. They were divorced.

"Later she married a man named Darling and then a man named Hughes, both of whom are dead.

"Always restless and eager for travel, and always used to wealth, she nevertheless joined the Klondike gold rush in '98 and was the first woman to enter that region.

Fortune in Jewels

"She owned considerable property and had a part ownership in several mines. She had diamonds, pearls, rubies and all kinds of gems, and friends by the hundreds. She went through several fortunes.

"After the sound pictures came in, I left the movies, choosing to travel with my mother rather than study voice culture. At last we landed in Florida and when I came north, I found my home and friends and neighbors there would look out for her if anything happened. I was shocked to hear of the circumstances of her death."

Mrs. Hughes, who was 75, died of [illegible] heartburn. Believing something had happened to her, neighbors notified the police and when they entered the shack, were met [illegible] a recluse.

Bingham Family Flees Fire in Wellesley

William J. Bingham, athletic director at Harvard University, his wife and two children, had a narrow escape from being trapped in their bedrooms early today by a fire that started in the basement of their home at 131 Glen road, Wellesley, and worked its way through the lower floor into the dining room.

"Smoke awakened my wife at 2:30 a. m." Bingham told a Boston Evening American reporter. "When she opened the door of her bedroom on the second floor the house was so filled with smoke that she couldn't see three feet ahead. She awakened me and I aroused our children, William, Jr., 13, and Richard, 11.

"When we went down stairs to the first floor we could hear the crackling of the flames but did not know where they were located.

"When we left the house I learned that the fire was in the basement. I telephoned the fire department and they did a fine job.

Bingham and his family sought refuge in the home of a neighbor while firemen battled the blaze. Many of the furnishings of the $12,-000 residence were ruined by smoke.

Bingham had returned from New York four hours before the fire started.

'Love Slave' Trial Nearing Its End

Jury Hears Her Story

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 11 (US)—One of Michigan's most bizarre love-murder trials will near its end today.

Mrs. Betty Baker, who astounded her policeman-husband when she confessed she and Carl Otis had carried on an affair for six years with the man she is accused of murdering, expected to know her fate [illegible] this week.

On the stand, Albert K. Baker, fun-loving husband, declared he never even had given a thought to the idea that his Betty might be unfaithful to him.

But her story pictured Clarence Schneider, 34 years her junior and the youth she says claims she killed in a jealous frenzy, as her veritable "love slave" for the last five or six years.

REVEALED TRYSTS

She revealed numerous trysts with Schneider, a "star boarder" at their home, while her husband was on his beat, and of [illegible] trips out of town with him.

She acknowledged she had been [illegible] when she found that she had [illegible] Schneider [illegible] Slee, and admitted, when they were on one of their frequent auto rides, but insisted it was an accident.

The fear that Baker knew of the killing was when his wife drove [illegible] home that night last June with the lifeless body of Schneider in the auto.

DIDN'T SUSPECT

Even then, he testified, he did not suspect that there had been a romance between her and the man [illegible] chair, he added.

"I never knew she had intimate relations with Schneider until I heard her tell about it here this week."

An ironic aspect of the case is that Schneider not only was a star boarder at the Baker home, but that he was Baker's close friend and occasionally went with him on hunting expeditions.

Girl Saves Child Trapped on Trestle

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 11 (INS)—Orra Louise Beaton, 16, was fighting for life in a hospital today after saving 5-year-old Jane Webster, trapped on a train trestle.

Orra locked Jane's hands around a tie, after lowering her over the side of the [illegible] train. She was just crawling over the side of the trestle herself when the engine hurled her to the bottom of the ravine, 15 feet.

Physicians said Orra had a fair chance to recover, thanks to an unidentified nurse who held a gaping wound together with her hands until an ambulance arrived.

Johnstown Again In Fear of Floods

Pittsburgh, Jan. 11 (AP)—The tri-state area—Western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and West Virginia—still bearing the scars of disastrous floods a year ago, anxiously watched rivers climb slowly out of their banks today.

In the "flood city" of Johnstown [illegible] by high waters last March [illegible] Stonycreek River touched 11.5 feet. Flood stage is 12 feet.

At the confluence of the Allegheny and Monongahela, which form the Ohio in Pittsburg's business section, a stage of more than 20 feet was reached last night.

35-Hour Week on State Jobs Asked

A 35-hour work week for state employes is provided in a bill filed at the State House today by Representative Thomas E. Barry of East Boston. The bill provides that state departments be closed all of Saturday and that work hours be changed from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Barry also seeks to change the state employes' retirement statute to permit them to retire after 20 years' service instead of 35 years.

AS I SEE IT

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International copyright and all other rights reserved.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 11—Bert Acosta, and his fellow aviators who have been flying for one side or the other in the Spanish civil war, are, to some extent, modern versions of the old-time American soldiers of fortune.

DAMON RUNYON

Many editorial writers are squawking about these flying fellows horning in to a private fight that doesn't concern them, and these squawks are undoubtedly justified from every standpoint.

But there hasn't been a war on the face of the earth in the past one hundred years that didn't find Americans tangled up in it, and we don't know of any sure way to stop them, unless science can figure a method of breeding the corpuscles of love of adventure and excitement out of American blood.

Long before this country got into the late unpleasantness with the central powers, thousands of Americans were fighting with the French and British forces, and as a matter of downright neutrality, they had no more business with them then than Americans have with the battlers in Spain now.

There wasn't much complaint from the editorial writers at that time, as we recall it, unless it might have been from some of the German editorialists. We presume the British editorialists of the period of our own revolution were quite squiffy about Lafayette cutting in on their war with us, too.

Americans Fought for Love of Action

It might be argued that the Americans in foreign uniforms in the big tussle were not mercenaries, like most of the neutrals who join out with the Spaniards, and that the majority of them were animated by love of liberty, and justice, and right.

Some of the old-time American soldiers of fortune liked to think of themselves as similar altruists, though it is my conjecture that most of them fought mainly for the love of fighting, with perhaps a vague hope of material reward as a secondary consideration. They seldom got that. But they fought anyway.

They fought because the rattle of musketry was music to their ears. Because they loved the swing and sway of marching columns. The creak of wagon wheel, and leather. The jangle of bridle bits, and spurs. The pound of hooves. The bright sunshine. The sifting white dust on the long roads. The campfires at night. The moon, and the stars. The free life.

It is true that many of them had enough sentiment in them to prefer the side that was battling to knock off some ruling tyranny. That sentiment, we think, is born in the average American. But few of the old-timers would quibble over the right or wrong of a cause that promised thrills, and some wages.

In a way, they were descendants of the professionals of ancient Europe, whose swords were always for hire to the highest bidder. Still, a lot of the old-time American soldiers of fortune fought in causes that they knew couldn't reward them much, even if the cause won.

Many of the old-timers first served in the American army, and in one of the American wars, such as that were, later finding over field of employment in penny ante skirmishes, and class D outfits in Central America and Cuba, and Mexico.

O'Hay could make even different flags. He didn't always know who for, or what for, except when he was fighting under the American flag. He finished over half a life time of fighting in France.

As a soldier of fortune, he was contemporaneous with Lee Christmas, Tracy Richardson, Sam Dreben, "the fighting Jew," and a host of other once famous gun runners, filibusterers, and all-around fighting men.

The Captain thought that of the old crowd, Tracy Richardson might be in the land of the living. He wasn't right sure. He could think of no others of hand.

Tracy got all shot up with the Princess Pats in France, as the Captain remembered. He recovered from that. Tracy was always getting shot up in the wars, big and little, the Captain said. He usually recovered.

A Cigarette 'Dying' Man's Sole Request

Sam Dreben, "the fighting Jew," working his short legs under his pudgy body like mad one day during a retreat in Mexico, came upon Tracy, apparently a dying man, reclining against a fence rail, the blood spurting from a chest wound with every respiration.

"Can I do anything for you, Tracy?" Sam asked.

"Why, yes, Sam," Tracy said. "Light a cigarette for me and stick it in my mouth."

Sam Dreben, a Russian Jew, bullet-headed, and squat built, was a vet soldier with the old 14th regulars in the Philippines. Then he became one of the most picturesque of the old-time soldiers of fortune.

He was a machine gunner with Red Flag Salazar in the Madera revolution in Mexico. Then purchasing agent for Pancho Villa's army, and finally a scout with Pershing's punitive expedition.

He went to France with the 36th Division, and won the Distinguished Service Cross, the Medaille Militaire, and the Croix de Guerre, all in a bunch one day, by capturing a posse of Germans single-handed. He died in Los Angeles about 10 years ago.

He was one of the bravest men that ever stepped in shoe leather, and if you don't believe it, ask General Pershing.

790 MILLIONS ASKED FOR WPA BY ROOSEVELT

TEXT OF MESSAGE

The text of the message follows:

The Speaker of the House of Representatives:

Sir—

In my budget message of January 3, 1937, I indicated my intention of requesting that Congress provide an appropriation of $790,000,000 for the purpose of carrying the Works Progress Administration and related programs from February 1 to January 30, 1937.

In general, the problem of relief has diminished with the extensive employment and recovery which has occurred in nearly all lines of business and industrial activity.

At the beginning of the present winter there were about 4,000,000 workers were employed in non-agricultural jobs than in March, 1933, and nearly twenty times more than 1,000,000 have found jobs with private industry during the past year.

ULTIMATE COST

In my message of March 18, 1936, I stated:

"The ultimate cost of the Federal Works Program will thus be determined by private enterprise. Federal assistance, which primarily itself removes the underlying conditions.

"Should industry co-operative ly achieve the goal of reemployment, the appropriation of $1,500,000,000, together with the unexpended balances of previous appropriations, will suffice to carry the Federal Works Program through the fiscal year 1937.

"Only if industry fails to reduce substantially the number of those now out of work will an emergency appropriation and further plans and policies be necessary."

Many private enterprises have co-operated, and I hope that there will be further substantial gains on the part of private employers.

Great assistance can be given to the agreement if all private employers in every part of the country will seek, in so far as they reasonably can, to offer additional workers from the relief rolls. In this connection it is worth noting that by far the larger part of those on the relief rolls fall into the categors of unskilled workers.

TWO-FOLD GAIN

As a result of the natural increase in our population, each year at least 400,000 new workers are seeking work, and this number of new jobs annually is necessary simply to prevent an increase in unemployment.

Certain other facts are worth noting. The tendency toward a longer work week has had an extremely important effect on reemployment. Hours of work in manufacturing industries, as shown by the Bureau of Labor Statistics index, averaged 35.3 hours per week in September, 1936. That average has increased by 26 per cent, to more than 40 hours per week in October, 1936.

While among most industries and most employers the maximum hours established under the NRA have not been greatly increased, it is worth noting that in some industries and among some employers the former maximum hours have been unreasonably increased.

UNREASONABLE HOURS

Every action of an employer along these lines obviously tends toward the stepping up of production without an equivalent stepping up of employment.

It is not unfair to say that those employers who are working their employees unreasonably long hours are failing to co-operate with the government and their fellow citizens in putting people back to work.

In March, 1936, more than 9,000,000 employable persons were provided for by the Works program, not including the Civilian Conservation Corps.

At the present time, as a result of an exhaustive review of the needs of the families of workers on the Works program, we have found that it will be necessary, during the winter months, to provide employment for at least 2,500,000 workers, of which number 250,000 will receive employment from funds appropriated to the emergency relief appropriation act of 1935.

FACTOR OF DROUTH

An unforeseen factor in federal expenditures for the relief of destitution has been the drouth, which laid waste large areas of the country, and brought disaster to hundreds of thousands of farm families. During last summer and fall, an emergency program was developed to provide employment for the most destitute of the stricken families.

With the advent of winter, about 250,000 of these families are being transferred from work projects to the resettlement administration, which will provide them with direct grants for subsistence through the winter, and make other provisions to get them started on an independent basis when the planting season arrives.

Since the balance of the present appropriation of $1,425,000,000 for relief and work relief will be largely sufficient to finance this program through the month of January, I recommend that the Congress provide a supplemental appropriation of $790,000,000 for this purpose for the remainder of the fiscal year 1937.

Respectfully,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

$100,000 A YEAR

The changes are part of an announced plan of the new chief executive to cut the appointees of the 19 closed banks $100,000 a year.

Rumored here in circulation that real estate, held by the closed banks, would be sold at auction to the highest bidder, as some such plan was followed in the past two years, was denied by the governor.

Governor Hurley remarked that, as state property, it could not be sold at less than three-fourths the assessed valuation. Arthur Gay, to hold bonds of the value for a short time, but not those were sold. The price, now are 30 per cent higher, the governor said.

Edward Hellie of Cambridge, who has been employed in the state department under Governor Ely, Hurley's incumbency, was appointed today to take charge of the investments of the closed banks.

FIERCE TO RESIGN

Bank Commissioner Henry H. Pierce is expected to resign at the end of this week to become president of the Merchants Co-operative Bank, the largest mutual savings bank in Massachusetts.

John Lacey Delaney of East Boston, a Democrat, resigned earlier today as Governor Hurley took office.

Resignation of one of the new governor's civilian aides caused considerable talk at the state house today. Joseph Scolponeti, one of nine aides appointed by Governor Hurley and at the inauguration, resigned as a result of the action of Governor Hurley in removing Monsignor Francis L. Phelan, who delivered the invocation at the inauguration, from the state service Saturday, after being informed of his replacement by Leo M. Cantwell.

A former school and college classmate of Hurley and for years a friend of the governor, Scolponeti submitted his letter of resignation in caustic terms.

Immediately afterward, Attorney General Paul A. Dever, offered Scolponeti an appointment as his staff, and what a tight scramble there was for the job. Dever and Hurley appeared to be about to break into the open.

"Hon. Charles F. Hurley,

"State House, Boston.

"Your Excellency:

"I am not a politician. Please accept my resignation as your personal aid.

"I deeply resent your recent official conduct regarding our mutual friend, Joe Scolponeti. His long friendship and unyielding loyalty to you makes your attitude so utterly unfair that I can no longer continue honorably in your service.

"Friendship and loyalty transcend experience.

"Carl F. Maraldi, M.D."

Dr. Maraldi is a native of Atcona, Italy. He was graduated from McGill University, Montreal, and studied at Harvard College and Harvard Medical School. He was an assistant professor at George Washington University and Tufts Medical College. He was a captain in the medical corps during the war and was decorated Governor Hurley as a personal aide.

The other civilian aides, whose appointment by the Governor set off a storm of protest are Joe E. Brown, the movie comedian; Harry E. Cushing, Boston broker and husband of James Roosevelt; Frank O'Donnell of Mills, Joseph A. Kozlowsky of Cambridge and David Lackey of Boston.

It was learned today that Charles A. King, 60, a veteran employe at the closed Lowell Trust Co., was discharged Saturday on orders from the State House, only to be reinstated today.

King was one of five clerks employed in liquidating the bank of Joseph P. Gargan, its liquidating agent, who is a son-in-law of Joseph P. Kennedy, Democratic leader in East Boston and former mayor of Boston.

Woman Hitchhiker Near Collapse With Child, 5

Dunmore, Jan. 11—Wrinkle lipsticks, exclusive today reported the arrest of Mrs. Anne Miller, 40, and her daughter, Ruth, 5, on charges of vagrancy. Mrs. Miller is in the Dunmore State Hospital in a serious condition.

The woman and the little girl were found early today on the highway near Turnpike. They had hitchhiked from Jacksonville, Fla., intending to go to Manchester, N. H., where Mrs. Miller has relatives, police said.

Suffering from hunger and exposure, Mrs. Miller was on the verge of collapse when taken into custody. Ruth had no food but, with the little child in the hospital, where she was given medical attention, the mother refused to eat. Her condition, though not critical, remained grave. The child will be cared for by town social service agencies.

Myerson Quits School Position

Dr. Abraham Myerson submitted his resignation to Governor Hurley today as a member of the board of trustees of the Wrentham State School.

As his reason for the resignation, Dr. Myerson gave pleasure of his duties as research director at the Boston State Hospital, his private practice and his teaching responsibilities.

Today's special meeting of the governor's council was expected to name a successor although the special meeting was called primarily to approve the hold of a new state treasurer to serve from now to January 20, when Treasurer-elect William E. Hurley takes office.

2 Bills On Auto Insurance Filed

Two bills designed to protect auto owners in obtaining new compulsory insurance were filed at the State House today.

One bill would compel insurance companies to reinstate all cases until a proper hearing is held by the board of appeals. The second bill provides that insurance on motor vehicles shall be in effect until the registration plates of vehicles have been collected by the registrar of motor vehicles.

PRESIDENT ASKS FOR CITY HALL LABOR COSTS

Washington, Jan. 11 (INS)—President Roosevelt today asked Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston to submit estimates of how many men the proposed City Hall project in Boston would take off relief rolls, and indicated the government might bear this portion of expense involved.

Mr. Roosevelt indicated further, said the matter as he left the White House that the government might see its way clear to provide a 10 per cent grant for the proposed $2,500,000 project, in addition to bearing the labor cost.

Mayor Mansfield called on the President to seek a 50 per cent Works Progress Administration grant for the hall, but apparently Mr. Roosevelt rejected this and substituted the proposal for labor costs. He told the Mayor that the project would employ 900 men for a year or 14 months.

While at dinner the mayor received no immediate answer to an invitation for him to view a parade in Boston celebrating ratification of the Bill of Rights in Revolutionary times, to be held March 17.

DEAL OFFICES BILL PUSHED

Washington, Jan. 11 (INS)—An administration bill calling for governmental reorganization along the lines recommended in President Roosevelt's message expected tomorrow will be introduced shortly, Speaker Bankhead announced today.

"The reorganization will be effected in one act," Bankhead said.

Asked if he expected opposition to the President's supplemental deficiency appropriation request, the speaker said:

"I don't expect any fight—they'll be administrative, but I think the wisdom of the Democratic majority will be to go along with the President.

"As far as I'm concerned, I'm going to try to hold all appropriations down to the minimum, but, of course, that the President wants comes first."

U. S. Indicts 36 in Election Fraud

Kansas City, Jan. 11 (AP)—Six election workers faced Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves today to answer charges they had conspired 775 votes fraudulently and illegally in four Kansas City precincts in the November election.

In most instances, the vote discrepancies charged were in favor of the Roosevelt-Garner ticket and the congressional candidacy of U. S. Jasper Bell. Both had the backing of the powerful T. J. "Tom" Pendergast Democratic organization, which for more than a decade has dominated Kansas City politics.

SUITOR HUNTED IN AUTO GAS DEATH

that under existing circumstances the couple could not have died in the machine.

Shows of the victims are being examined and particles of earth being analyzed in an endeavor to find a clue as to the couple's whereabouts prior to discovery of their bodies.

First intimation of the fact that state police were interested in the case came with the assertion by Prof. Henderson that certain aspects of the case were inconsistent with the finding that the couple met their deaths from carbon monoxide in the parked auto.

Today it was revealed that Trooper Mulcahy has been working for the past week on the case with Prof. Henderson.

Evidence which they have gathered is understood to be so important that state police officials have decided to request the bodies of the couple be exhumed for further examination.

DEAD 20 HOURS

While the nature of evidence was being closely guarded it was understood that the secret investigation had started on the theory that the couple were dead some 20 hours before their bodies were found.

Such a theory presented the question of possible murder in state police and it was decided to conduct a thorough investigation into the deaths of the couple.

They were last seen at a roadhouse some 40 miles from the point where their auto was found mired down in Guilford.

WINDOWS OPEN

State police officials said today the case was either one of murder or accidental death. In case of murder they said, the couple were probably killed by the effects of monoxide and later driven to the point where the bodies were found.

Windows of the auto were so arranged, it was pointed out, that it might appear the occupants had halted their machine at the roadside and opened the windows to permit them to get some fresh air.

Investigators, however, pointed out that this would defeat the purpose of the window arrangement as they were sufficiently open so that it would be impossible for the couple to be so affected by the fumes that they would die.

CABINET WILL STAY INTACT

Despite rumors of from one to four resignations, reporters close to the White House predicted today the same official family will be functioning after inauguration day.

This includes Harry Woodring, who was given a "temporary" appointment as secretary of War after George H. Dern died.

Postmaster-General James A. Farley may settle a Cabinet job if he receives a sufficiently attractive offer from private business.

All Lost and Found ads published in the Boston American-Sunday Advertiser are broadcast daily at 10:55 A. M. over Station WCOP at no additional charge.

'Guinea Pig' In Death Quiz

Marshall Files 17 Utility Bills

Seventeen bills seeking greater regulation of public utilities companies operating in Massachusetts were filed at the State House today by Attorney Wycliffe C. Marshall of Watertown.

Several of the bills are directed at the telephone company seeking an investigation of rates and quality of service on intra-state calls.

The Price of Milk Is One Cent Less

NEW England Dairies has made a wholesale price reduction of one cent per quart to dealers in the Boston metropolitan market.

* * *

The purpose of this wholesale price reduction is to assist producers associated with New England Dairies to market a larger share of their product as fluid milk and to reduce the proportion to be marketed as butter and cheese.

Mother, Child Die In Fire; 3 Burned

Willard, O., Jan. 11 (INS)—Fire in their farm house resulted today in the death of Mrs. Florence B. Shaw, 36, and her daughter, Emily, five. Three other children, Kenneth 10, John, three, and Hella Jane, two, suffered possibly fatal burns.

SURGEONS SHOW HOW MAJOR OPERATION IS PERFORMED

PREPARATION—This is the first step in a modern surgical operation. A nurse, gloved and masked, places sterilized instruments in exact array. One error—one germ—one glittering bit of steel not ready to hand—might mean a patient's death.

ANESTHESIA — "Relax now and breathe deeply," the patient is told, as the ether is administered and the magic of science banishes pain and fear and consciousness, itself. A nurse keeps a trained finger on the patient's pulse.

INCISION—Now the surgeon goes into action, with a human life depending on his knowledge and skill and swiftness. His assistants are at hand, the nurse still counts the fluttering pulse beats, but it is the surgeon who wields the scalpel, making the first incision. Every second counts now.

Camera Invades Operating Room

Vivid Closeups Tell Story of Modern Surgical Technique

You don't need to listen any more to the folks who are always telling you about their operation.

Thanks to the courtesy of officers, surgeons, nurses and attendants of the Maplewood Hospital, Malden, you can see for yourself how modern surgery works its scientific miracles.

Bill Jones, Boston Evening American staff photographer, was permitted to make a series of camera closeups, showing successive steps in operating room technique.

His pictures tell a graphic story of the skill and training and preparation and equipment which make possible the victories which our men in white, and "ladies in white" win today against that grimmest of all adversaries, death, himself.

Under the direction of Dr. Thomas W. Leavitt, the Maplewood hospital is one of the many institutions, public and private, which serve Greater Boston residents.

When accidents or sudden illness strike, the emergency is met by just such hospitals as this. The surgeon doesn't ask if his patient is rich or poor, humble or influential.

He may not even know the name of the man or woman on the operating table.

He's a servant of humanity, not of the individual.

But there's nothing impersonal about a surgical operation—about saving the patient.

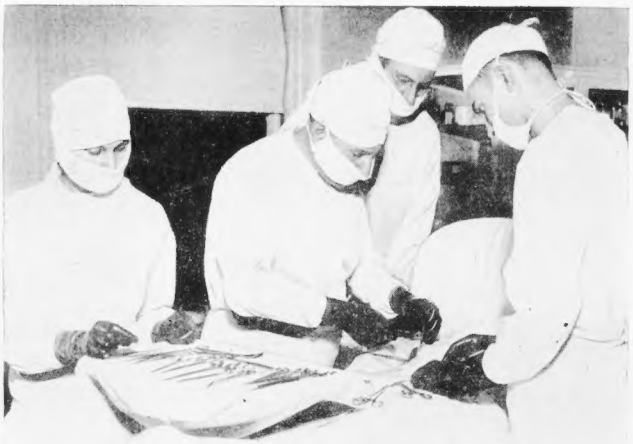
So here's your chance to peek into the room, brightly lighted, white walled room where the suffering go—to be brought back to the land of the health seekers. Knowledge slowly acquired by centuries after century of study and experience.

The picture series starts by showing you the operating room nurse in her spotless uniform, sterile rubber gloves and mask, as she prepares the complicated array of glittering instruments, every one of them must be ready to hand, last a wasted second delay the surgeon.

DELAY—A complication develops. The incision must be enlarged. Time is flying, the strong, unfailing fingers move with lightning precision. "Watch that anesthetic, nurse."

NEARING FINISH—The worst is over. The difficult job is done. Here, the surgeon is removing the last of his gauze pads and sponges, just before closing the incision. Long training makes every motion sure and efficient. Science has flouted death once more.

STITCHING UP—This is easy routine now, but the punctilious care of the surgeon does not for a moment relax. He places each stitch surely, deftly; just enough, no more. The gloved hands seem unwearied, unshaken by their terrible responsibility.



AT LAST—Now the final stitch is taken, the incision closed. Heart strong. Pulse regular. The human machine is ready to function again. Rest and care will restore the patient's strength as the merciful spell of the anesthetic comes to an end and the conscious spirit struggles back to its earthly shell, put in order and repaired by another seeming miracle of surgical science.

Betty Alden on 'Beacon Hill'

Sarah Porter Hunsaker to Wed David Swope on February 27

By BETTY ALDEN

MISS SARAH PORTER HUNSAKER, daughter of Professor and Mrs. Jerome C. Hunsaker of Louisburg square, has selected the date for her wedding to David Swope, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Swope of New York . . . and is busy completing the proverbial million and one preparations for the event . . .

She will be married on February 27, at 4 p. m. at a picturesque ceremony in King's Chapel, which will be followed by a wedding reception at the Hunsaker home . . .

Sarah Porter Hunsaker

The bride-to-be has asked her sister, Alice Hunsaker, to be her maid of honor and the three bridesmaids will be Mrs. Rupert Maclaurin (Elfreide Carter) of Cambridge, Miss Louisa Strusance of Wilmington, Delaware, and Miss Henrietta Swope, sister of the bridegroom . . .

Gerard Swope, Jr., of Washington, D. C., who is a twin brother of the bridegroom, will be best man . . .

Miss Hunsaker attended Sarah Lawrence College and has been an assistant at the Museum of Fine Arts for the last two seasons . . . Her father is professor of mechanical engineering and aeronautics at M. I. T. . . .

Mr. Swope's other brothers are Isaac Swope of Philadelphia, and John, who is an instructor in astronomy at Harvard . . . Their father is president of the General Electric and the family home is in Ossining, N. Y. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Swope of New York and Port Washington, L. I., are uncle and aunt of the bridegroom-to-be . . .

Tongues are wagging again because Nat Saltonstall appeared in public the other evening with Frances Rich, attractive daughter of the movie star Irene Rich . . . and everyone recalls that friends have been linking their names in a romance for almost a year . . .

Nat's carelessness in evading reporters, who insist upon calling him Boston's No. 1 bachelor, have made him extremely careful and cautious, so he took two other men with him when he escorted Frances to the Towne Club Saturday evening . . . with the result that the gossips will have an eye for romance and still unable to determine whether the rumors are true or whether Nat was merely acting as a guide to Boston for his out of town friends . . .

Frances came here from New York to assist the country's foremost sculptress, Malvina Hoffman, with the latter's exhibit which opens today at the Vose Galleries . . . For dining and dancing the other evening she wore a filmy white mousseline de soie printed with black coin dots . . . much like one of the models fashioned for Dietz to wear in "Camille" . . .

Hosts at Cocktail Party

MR. AND MRS. WHITON BREWER gave such an entertaining cocktail party in their apartment on the Hill Saturday afternoon, that none of the guests made a move to leave until the host and hostess finally put on their coats and hats and announced that they had to run to keep a dinner date with friends on another corner of the Hill . . . It was a very informal group that had gathered to drink a toast to one of Nancy's friends from Worcester, so Nancy and Whit were confident they could break up the party themselves without offending anyone . . .

Some of the guests included the Wallie Pierces, Amy Lang and Oscar Skinner, Mr. and Mrs. David Bangs, who were married recently, and Harry Draper and Phil Tucker, who took matters in hand when the host and hostess had to leave and induce them all to adjourn to the Towne Club . . . Betty Sagendorph was another in the group as was Dick Shreve . . .

The newlyweds, Austen and Mary Frost Osgood, made a foursome at the Towne with Mr. and Mrs. George Rowland . . . the latter in a long military cape of scarlet velvet over a soft, clinging gown of black velvet and lame . . .

Tea Honors Isabel Gardiner

FRANCES LOWELL and Patty Preston were two of the pourers yesterday afternoon at the small informal tea, which Mrs. Foster Gardiner gave at her Brookline home in honor of her daughter, Isabel, and her future son-in-law, Royall Victor, Jr. . . .

Isabel and Royall have been engaged for some time . . . so, although it was just announced yesterday, it was not much of a surprise to the relatives and close friends who came to extend their best wishes . . .

The bride-to-be, a tall willowy blonde who is constantly in demand as a mannequin in high class fashions shows, wore a silver lame dress with a corsage of white orchids presented by her fiance . . .

Her sister, Polly, clad in an afternoon gown of raspberry color, also poured, and Mrs. Henry Kittredge of Cambridge, and Miss Dora Kittredge helped out at the tea tables . . .

Mrs. Larz Anderson returned from New York yesterday morning . . . whence she had gone to wave bon voyage to her distinguished husband, who's off on a cruise . . . so she was able to attend the tea and greet the young man who will become Isabel's husband . . .

The bride-to-be is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club . . . she is a niece of Professor and Mrs. George Lyman Kittredge of Cambridge, and a cousin of Dr. and Mrs. Conrad Wesselhoeft of Marlborough street, and Mr. Samuel Vaughan of Beverly Farms . . .

Mr. Victor is the son of Mrs. Royall Victor of Syosset, Long Island . . . he attended Phillips Andover and is a member the graduating class at Harvard . . . His clubs include Hasty Pudding, Institute of 1770, and the Owl . . . He is a brother of Martin Victor, a student at the Yale Law School, and Nancy Victor who is at Foxcroft . . .

Music Notes

By RUTH MARSTERS

District Metropolitan, the celebrated Artturo Toscanini, began rehearsals with the Boston Symphony Orchestra this morning in preparation for his two weeks' engagement as guest conductor.

In addition to the Saturday night Symphony Hall on Friday afternoons and Saturday evenings, January 15 and 16, 22 and 23, Mr. Metropolitan will conduct the concert in Sanders Theatre on Thursday evening of this week, and the third concert of the Monday evening series on January 18.

The program alike for the three concerts of this week, will include two of Mr. Mitropoulos' transcriptions for string orchestra, that of the introduction and the final air of Dido, "When I Am Laid in Earth," from Henry Purcell's Lee in "Dido and Aeneas", and the arrangement of Beethoven's great String Quartet in C sharp minor, Op. 131.

Castelnuovo's Prelude Gioioso, the Second Suite from Alfredo Casella's opera, "La Donna Serpente" and Respighi's Toccata for Piano and Orchestra, in which Jesus Maria Sanroma will perform the piano part, will be presented on the 22nd.

* * *

On Wednesday morning in the ballroom of the Statler Hotel, Martha Lavinia Spaulding will appear as guest artist in the series of Boston Morning Musicales. Mr. Levitzki substitutes for Vladimir Horowitz who is prevented by illness from fulfilling his engagement.

Mr. Levitzki's program will include Sonata in A major by Scarlatti, Beethoven's Sonata in F minor, Op. 57, Brahms' Rhapsody in G minor, Schumann's "Warum," and "Aufschwung," Chopin's Preludes in A major and F major followed by the C sharp minor Scherzo, Ravel's "Jeux d'Eau," the Liszt arrangement of Paganini's "La Campanella" and finally "The Enchanted Nymph," a composition of Levitzki's own.

JORDAN HALL CONCERTS—On Tuesday evening Bernard Rogers will conduct the second concert of the series for Chamber Orchestra. Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, eminent English duo-pianists, will be the soloists.

On Wednesday evening Roy Harrow will conduct the Metropolitan Singers, a group of 100 male voices, in a Jordan Hall concert.

On Thursday evening in Jordan Hall, Martha Lane, mezzo-soprano, will give her first American recital following her recent concert tour of England, Holland, Sweden and Norway.

The program will include songs by Rasi and Scarlatti, Beethoven, Brahms, Strauss, Richard Trunk, Sinding, Grieg, Warlock, Howells, Cripps and Bax.

* * *

On Saturday afternoon, Jordan Hall will be the scene of the first Boston concert of the season of the celebrated English pianist, Myra Hess.

The program which Miss Hess will present on this occasion will include: Sarabande, Minuet, and Air by Purcell, "The Fall of the Leafs" by Pearson, "A Toye" by Farnaby, the Allegro from Arnold Third Concerto, and the Haydn Variations in F minor.

Junior Philomatheia Plans Busy Month

NO NEED for languishing in solitude. Junior Philomatheia has taken thumb-twiddling gals to its heart and their program for the next month is an amazing whirl of events.

If your interest lends toward things intellectual, the January round table under the direction of Florence Garrity, has planned some worthwhile lectures. If art, music and New Hampshire hills lure you, the sports committee, chairmanned by Mary Conard, will keep you busy. For the girls who prefer dancing to a winter hand, plans are afoot for a series.

Outline Plans

This varied program was made known at a meeting of the club last night at the club rooms. Virginia Grimes of Chestnut Hill introduced the day's guest speaker, Thomas J. Mackinnon, M. D., former captain of the Royal Army Medical Corps, who transported wounded from Belgium to "Australia—The Pearl of Southern Waters."

Mary Dowling of Cambridge, who is also active in Prospective Club affairs, entertained members with a series of sparkling xylophone songs.

On Thursday night, the literary round table had its members well hold forth at the chalet with a lecture by Francis J. Low S. J. on "Communism and Youth of America." Rita O'Donoghue will be hostess and Esther Barrett will assume the chairmanship. Esther attended yesterday's meeting, her wine ensemble topped with a striped lapin coat.

The newly formed book club, under direction of Josephine Egan, will offer a new feature. Mary Malloy will give a book report on one of the best sellers.

Assisting Miss Garrity are Frances O'Sullivan, Catherine Connolly, Mary C. McCarthy, Katherine Hallick and Frances Ratigan.

Plan Ball

Chairman of the refreshment committee is Alice Mahoney. Her aides include Alice Quarta, Mary Quigley, Maida McGrath, Mary E. McCarthy, Mary Kerrigan, Helen Kehoe and Pauline Rooney.

Members of the hospitality committee include Margaret Lesson, Margaret Farley, Kathleen Moran, Elizabeth Clancy and Mary Ryan.

Novel decorations will trim the Simpson House on the last Friday evening in January for the snow ball. Doris Reardon of West Medford is in charge of the party. She looked most attractive at yesterday's meeting. Her hair-do and white print was gay and youthful.

Mary Allen will plan the decorations, assisted by a score of club members.

Holy Cross Folk To Hold Dance

Holy Cross and its woman folk went to the Copley Square Hotel yesterday afternoon for tea. It was in preparation for the club supper dance which is scheduled for the 22d of this month at the Hotel Somerset.

Mrs. John E. Spellman of Milton, who will act as chairman of the party, wore a black crepe dress . . . its bodice fashioned of Kelly green sequins. Her topper of black antelope completed her outfit.

By GEORGE HOLLAND

EXCLUSIVE: Tiffs between Katharine Hepburn, the star, and Helen Jerome the author, enlivened the stay of "Jane Eyre" at the Colonial . . . "Third act trouble," always serious in a play that just misses being "right," was the cause of the discord . . . The play opens tonight in Chicago, but unless rewriting is adjusted to her demand, Miss Hepburn will dictate bookings so that a New York appearance this season will be foregone . . . Miss Jerome's previous adaptation, that of "Pride and Prejudice," takes the stage of the same theater tonight . . . All is harmonious . . . Colonel Robert R. McCormick, the Chicago publisher has been in Boston since last Tuesday . . . He was at the Mayfair, attended by his Oriental valet . . . "In a year, America will forget again that there was a depression," was Colonel McCormick's "bullish" opinion . . . He gave his opinion that the stock market would go higher and said that he favored transportation stocks . . . He said also—he's a Republican—that it would "take a year" to unburden himself of his opinion of the administration . . . In 1932, Colonel McCormick declared in a radio address that Boston would have to curtail expenses or join the lists of municipal bankrupts . . . Mayor Curley took umbrage at the remark and threatened suit . . . Nothing happened . . . The Chicagoan will be here for another two weeks . . . He flew to Boston to place himself in the care of a Back Bay physician . . . Governor Hurley and Attorney Joseph Scolponetti, who are now on opposite sides of the political fence, were encamped together 20 years ago in college politics . . . In the same political "party" was James Linehan, of Newton, who is an important executive in the new managerial end of Suffolk Downs . . .

GEORGE HOLLAND

Once Over Lightly:

Leo Kabatznick, the Boston art dealer, will van his belongings to the Hollywood section, where, on February 15 he will start business in the Sunset Boulevard block where William Haines, the one-time juvenile, has made a success as an interior decorator . . .

Helen Jacobs, the tennis ace, sends word to Boston friends that she is not engaged to that British diplomat . . . By sundown, Mayor Mansfield, in Washington in person, should have an answer from President Roosevelt indicating whether Boston will get a new City Hall . . . Gielgud's "Hamlet" will open in Boston, February 8, and Judith Anderson and Lillian Gish will play the Queen-Mother and Ophelia . . . "Swing Your Lady" comes February 1 . . . Ben Raphael, the department store chief, who has been ailing with a serious cold, has chosen California as the locale of his winter-vacation . . .

Tin-Can Note:

A goat tethered outside the Copley Plaza, to the rear-end of a vintage automobile, had passers-by wondering last night . . . But when a young man and woman emerged an hour or so after the tethering, only the doorman and Officer Frank Hughes saw the pay-off . . . The goat snapped at the young woman's face, tearing off her hat and then headfirst she wore to shield her features . . . Her escort was so angry that he packed the goat in the rumble seat, and slammed down the top . . . Then they proceeded to a Beacon street party—a new kind of stunt party where a strange animal was necessary for admittance.

Chatter:

The going-away party of "Blossom Time's" cast was held at the Copley Square . . . Diana Gaylen, the prima donna, goes to Washington to understudy Helen Gleason in "Frederika" . . . Eddie De Lange, the band-singer who is star-timber for the movies, arrived in town at 2 a. m. with his manager-shadow, Billy Carney . . . Absent since Thanksgiving, the De Lange-Hudson organization returns to a month's welcome in the form of solid Boston bookings . . . With the return of De Lange, good old days return to the Club Broadway, where the magnetic red-haired singer holds forth for relaxation after a night's work here and there in New England . . . The Boston Theater Treasurers' Club will hold their annual meeting and dinner at the Westminster, Sunday, January 17 . . .

A New Star Makes Bow

Sonja Henie will grace the screen of the Metropolitan on Thursday when her "One In a Million" opens a week's engagement.

Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor In 'Broadway Melody of 1937'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Los Angeles, Jan. 11—When Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer put Eleanor Powell and Bob Taylor in "Broadway Melody of 1936" they were two unknown youngsters who meant no more to Mr. and Mrs. Fan than Sam Schmaltz or Sadie Gultz.

Now they are two of the biggest stars in the business and the announcement of their reunion in "Broadway Melody of 1937" is one grand break for the box office. If you ask me, Eleanor and MGM is determined to repeat on the first Bellinger with Bing Crosby Run back to do the directorial honors and Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed already whipping up the tunes, and Bob Louella O. Parsons dy Eleanor dancing.

If that still isn't enough—they're bringing out Sophie Tucker for a "song" role with several other important Broadway personalities.

The past fame and glory of the Alexandria Hotel, original night life spot of Hollywood, is to be resurrected on the screen under the title of "Hollywood's Magic Carpet." The story idea is a novel one and launches Maurice Gebber, Hollywood farrier, as a movie producer.

The said Harold Clifton of England is backing Hollywood studies, Inc., the new company, to the tune of a couple of million dollars, a pretty figure even in depreciated dollars.

The new producers have taken over the old Talisman studios and a search is on for walking, sell boys, inside, desk clerks and anybody else who has an Alexandria anecdote up his sleeve about Wally Reid, D. W. Griffith, Mickey Neilan, Blanche Sweet, Mack Sennett, Theodore Roberts, Charlie Chaplin and all the other old timers who haunted the Alexandria in its heyday.

I had been hoping that Melvyn Douglas, after "Theodora Goes Wild," would be given more light comedy roles. But alas, his next is "Madame X," opposite Gladys George. The reason for this decision, I hear, entire nous, is because he is one actor who can grow old on the screen and do it gracefully.

Douglas, who hid his light under a bushel in heavy drama for so long, could easily be another William Powell if given the right roles. But then I guess it's not up to us to argue with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's casting.

The most difficult road to success is that traveled by younger sisters, daughters and other close relatives of celebrities principally because any success that may come to them is usually credited to family influence.

That's why Joan Fontain can feel elated over winning the feminine lead opposite John Beal in "Wings of Mercy" at RKO. Joan is the sister of Olivia De Haviland and so anxious was she not to trade on Olivia's fame, that she took the name of her stepfather.

She played a small role first in "Quality Street" and was so good that Sam Briskin gave her this break and now she's on her own.

Snapshots of Hollywood: Just heard that CLAIRE DODD, Warner Bros. actress, and her husband, JACK STRAAS, have a two months old son. They're calling him JOHN MICHAEL and news of his arrival is just now being made public; our guess is that ALICE FAYE and TONY MARTIN will tell it to a preacher before 1938 rolls 'round. Tony gets home in a few days and Alice has been working nights so she can get off to meet him; ELEANORE WHITNEY at the Zanzi nightie with LEW AYRES and her ex-boy friend, JOHNNY DOWNS, with MARY CARLISLE, ALFRED VANDERBILT will really have to do something about all those press agents who telephone to tell us their actresses are lunching, dining and cocktailing with him—he's too popular. JUNE LANG'S pete, Jill, has wandered away and she is inconsolable. Never realized how a pete could walk into your heart until Marty, Jr., joined our family of dogs. CLARK GABLE, ROBERT TAYLOR and SPENCER TRACY at one table in the MGM commissary excitedly and hopeful for the visiting spectators.

New Beauty On Howard Stage

The Old Howard this week introduces a sensational New York night club act, "Leda and the Swan," with the burlesque Venus, Tamara, as the beauty in this classic fable.

Others featured in the "Swing Girls" burlesque are "Boots" Burns and Loretta Martin, Lew DeVoe, the comedian; Billie Pitzer, the Three Jolly Tars, the Burns, Baker and Burns dancing trio and the Fields and Smith team.

In addition to the three daily shows, there will be a Friday midnight carnival.

On the Old Howard screen for the week are "Annapolis Farewell," with Tom Brown, Rosalind Keith and Sir Guy Standing, and "You Tough to Kill," with Victor Jory and Sally O'Neil.

Hinda Wassau will be at the Howard next week as star in "Maids of Manhattan."

'Green Light'

By Lloyd C. Douglas

A GREAT AUTHOR'S STORY OF LOVE VS. DUTY

(A Cosmopolitan Picture to Be Released Soon by Warner Brothers)

SYNOPSIS

As Dr. Stewart Paine, followed by his faithful Irish setter Sigma, seeks to bury his past and efficiently assist Dr. Darnell from Parkman Hospital, Phyllis Dexter, daughter of the tragic victim of Parkman's operating blunder, is engaging a vacation in London with a willful friend.

She rejects obviously or Brian Harcourt, famous head of Trinity Cathedral at home.

During his visit to the church, her friend breaks the tragic news of the passing of not only Phyllis' mother, but of her father as well. Phyllis returns speedily to America.

CHAPTER 5

"The same old loads were still moving. Same kind of straining horses; bracing their lathery shoulders against the same hot collars, lashed and yelled at by the same cloddish drivers; and Elizabeth, up there, not listening, but hearing; not gladly approving, but accepting . . .

"Good-night! . . . Well, I'm afraid I don't know. I can't quite define it. Maybe it has to hearing at all on the thing I've been trying to talk about . . . I just know that for an instant, down at Saint Olave's, there came over me an almost stifling wave of —of comprehension.

"And I said to myself, 'If ever I get into trouble, I should like to be able to come to some place like this, where today's struggle and pain is being hammered down hard on top of yesterday's—and let mine be pounded into dust and silence, along with Elizabeth's.'"

Phyllis had dashed over to a little shop on Southampton Row to read her rumors. They were going on in the old Clandonian Market today.

While she was gone, Pat received the cable. Jeffers, slowly, wearily, turned her face in her hands, and almost considered how with the knowledge that might break the shocking news. Phyllis would be back at any moment, eyes alight with fun to be off for the day's excursion. The door swung open.

Pat Agrees

"Well—are we ready? It's going to be lovely in an hour; you will see . . . What is it, dear? Don't you feel well?"

"Phyllis, would you mind very much if we didn't go out there today? I'm not quite in the mood for it. Maybe the fog has been dampening me. How about going down to Saint Olave's—to talk to Elizabeth? I believe I'd like to. Well try out your little theory on me. Agreed?"

"Of course, dear," consented Phyllis cheerfully, a little disturbed by Pat's depression. "We can go to the Cathedral any time . . . I would be glad to have another session with Elizabeth."

It was only on when they arrived and there had the little church all by themselves, walking slowly forward through the central aisle, they paused, seated themselves in the right pew, and then could look up into the apse at the marble bust of Elizabeth, or, more accurately, at the marble silence. Stirred by the sound of a suppressed sob and the sight of Phyllis' head, bowed, Pat and Phyllis interlaced their fingers, and whispered, hopefully: "Can't you feel it, dear?"

"That doesn't matter so much," said Pat thickly. "Just so you hear it."

"I do!" Phyllis' tone was confident. "It thrills me! 'On, on, on'—not just going around—around—but pressing on! Headed toward something that has to be worked out—not alone by Elizabeth, or you, or me—or on some particular day in 1869 or 1929—"

Pat suddenly clutched Phyllis' hand in both of hers and whispered, hoarsely: "Darling — I must tell you now. Something quite dreadful has happened. I wish it had happened to ME. One more tragedy wouldn't—"

Phyllis paled a little and her eyes widened, bewilderly, as she searched Pat's disfigured face. She swallowed convulsively and asked, with a nervous catch in her voice: "Pat, what are you trying to tell me?"

With agitated hands Pat opened her handbag, took out the folded and crinkled yellow message, tucked it into Phyllis's palm and closed her fingers over it. Then she slipped to her knees on the worn and faded hassock, resting her head on her right-lightly folded arms . . . The steady rumble of the ancient city, symbolic of its everlasting presence, throbbed dully in her ears.

Terrible Truth

Phyllis stared at Grace's cable. It was addressed to Pat:

FATHER AND MOTHER DIED THIS AFTERNOON. SUNSHINE. TELL PHYLLIS GENTLY.

The message slowly slipped from her relaxed fingers and dotted to the floor.

She stunned to concentrate, she was conscious only of a ping of agony. Sunshine as she had never experienced.

For a long time they knelt together, Phyllis utterly devastated with grief and sobbing heartbreakingly. She was Gregory's child, sympathetically brought a sweet of water. Pat wanly smiled their gratitude but did not permit Phyllis to be disturbed. The sobbing gradually subsided. Phyllis was very quiet now. Pat waited. The minutes dragged out into the third quarter struck. Even a neighboring cockatoo-flower, bedecked . . . Phyllis stirred and stiffened to attention. Pat was ruthlessly examined out of a pain-ful reserve by the clutch of the girl's strong fingers on her arm.

"What is it, dear?" asked Pat. "Listen?" whispered Phyllis, widowed. "Pat!" she called in a high, distant little shrill. "I can hear it!"

For more than three-quarters of a century Trinity Cathedral had been one of the most highly organized institutions of the entire Middle West.

This distinction may have been due partly to her imposing architectural grandeur, a Gothic strongly reminiscent of York Minster.

It may have been accounted for also by her commanding location for the Cathedral close was bounded by spacious city streets, one of them Lake Boulevard, the most prominent avenue in the city.

Moreover, the great edifice faced beautiful Madison Park. It had the considerable advantage of her massive towers and old-worldish buttresses.

At the rear of the main edifice and facing on Marlborough Street was the Bishop's Mansion, the Parish House and the residence of the Dean.

George Harcourt was a product of Trinity Cathedral. Her mind and his were in complete accord. Perhaps they may have influenced one another somewhat during the 20 years of his deanship. His serenity had become so potent that persons of every conceivable type came to him for advice, consolation, and encouragement. It was a heavy load to carry, but he never complained of it.

Enter the Bovary Bustle!

NOT CONTENT with being one of the gayest of the bright-print-on-black-ground family, this important little jacketed silk frock sports the newest silhouette. Enter the Bovary bustle! Snatched from a play popular in Paris. It's a frock made to order to cheer up your black Persian or caracul. And ready to stand on its own merits as a complete afternoon costume in the merry, merry springtime. A very fine silk crepe is used, and the dipped, flared back skirt is lined with black taffeta to give animation to the folds, and add the merest suspicion of a rustle. The back-flared peplum is the modified form of Bovary bustle that's going to be big news in spring fashions. Under a black wool coat, it can become your first spring ensemble. Brilliant silk jersey is rolled around the turban. It's black silk jersey, very sleek, pointed on top. Miss Lee Stevenson models: a Fashion Congress winner. Women Aid Birthday Ball

GRAND PRIZES TO BE GIVEN

January 29 is a night for everyone to remember.

It is the night of the President's birthday ball to aid the war on infantile paralysis.

It will be held at the Boston Garden. Dazzling pageantry will feature the evening. A huge birthday cake will be an appropriate appointment of the evening.

A trip to Bermuda and a 1937 Ford sedan will head the array of prizes.

The women of Boston are to play a major part in the occasion. A large committee of women are working strenuously to make the occasion a success.

Mayor Chairman

Mrs. John J. Horgan is chairman of the women's committee. Also on the committee is Miss Pauline Ehrlich.

Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield is honorary chairman of the occasion and Joseph A. Maynard, collector of the port, is chairman of the general committee.

Prior to his departure for Washington to interview the President today, Mayor Mansfield announced his intention of inviting governors of the six New England states as well as the executives of the cities and towns of Massachusetts to attend the Boston celebration.

Inasmuch as the Boston ball is being held the evening before the President's birthday, these guests will have the opportunity to attend Boston's affair and not miss the celebration in their own communities.

5000 Tickets

More than 5000 tickets have already been distributed for the ball and it is expected that an equal amount will be allotted before the end of the week.

Applications may be made by mail or in person at the headquarters of the Birthday Ball Committee, 258 Washington street.

Among the Boston organizations and institutions which will benefit by the affair are the Harvard Infantile Paralysis Commission, the Massachusetts General Hospital, Children's Hospital, City Hospital, Community Health Association and the Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children.

Ex-Gov. Foss Guest At Hyde Park Fete

Former Governor Eugene N. Foss, during whose term Hyde Park was annexed to Boston, a quarter of a century ago, will be a guest at the district's celebration of the 25th anniversary, the committee announced today. The fete is at the Hyde Park Current Events Club on Jan. 25.

Also present will be former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, who headed Boston's government at the time of annexation.

Bridge Suppers For Late Wintry Nights

Desserts Should Be Prepared Ahead

FROM MARTHA LEE'S MONDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

IT SEEMS that the bridge players are always looking about for some new idea in food to serve the club or the friends that drop in for an evening's game.

The hostess usually likes to serve some hot dish with a beverage before sending guests out in the winter cold. Of course, her presence is required in the game; so she must serve something that can be prepared easily at the last moment.

We are offering a few suggestions that necessitate but little final preparation, which is of such a nature that someone may easily help with it.

Any one of the hot dishes given here combined with a small salad of vegetables, fish, meat or eggs will make an attractive plate to serve on such an occasion.

If the friends gathered are of the sweet-loving nature, we suggest some light dessert that may be prepared in advance, one of which is given for your.

BLUSHING BUNNY

½ pound American cheese
1 tablespoon butter
1 can tomato soup
1-3 teaspoon mustard
1-3 teaspoon pepper

Cut cheese in small pieces and place in upper part of a double boiler with the butter, to melt. Add tomato soup and seasoning, and cook until smooth, which will require about 20 minutes. Serve on buttered toast.

Cheese can be prepared and the last hand placed while the Blushing Bunny is cooking.

CREAMED MEAT OR FISH IN CROUSTADES

To make croustades—Cut slices of bread 1½ to 2 inches thick and remove crusts. Cut slices into diamonds, triangles, hearts, squares, or any desired shape. Form into cases by carefully removing center crumb, leaving a wall around sides and bottom about ¼-inch thick. Place these cases on a flat baking sheet in a slow oven (300 deg. F.) to dry and begin to toast. Before they become brown, take from oven and brush with melted butter. Then return to oven to brown.

FILLING FOR CROUSTADES

6 tablespoons butter
6 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 cups milk
Fish, meat or eggs

Make a white sauce by melting butter in saucepan and blending in flour; then add milk, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper. Cook until thickened, which will require about 10 minutes in order to eliminate raw flour taste. If a double-boiler is used, probably 20 minutes will be required for cooking.

Add a one-pound can of tuna fish, salmon, or other seafood; or cooked veal, lamb, or other meat; or quartered hard-boiled eggs. Add additional seasoning to taste. A dash of angostura bitters with the creamed eggs will enhance the flavor, if added just before serving. Serve filling in croustades. Croustades may be made any one desired and may be fried in deep fat instead of toasted in the oven.

TOMATO CLUB SANDWICH

12 slices bread
Mayonnaise or butter
6 slices tomato
6 strips bacon, broiled
½ pound melting cheese
½ cup milk
Salt and pepper
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon dry mustard

Trim crusts from bread. Toast on both sides. Spread each slice on one side with butter or mayonnaise. Make six sandwiches, using bacon and tomato for filling. Cut diagonally and pour over each a spoonful of sauce made with the cheese, milk and seasonings cooked in a double-boiler until cheese is melted. Serve with celery hearts and pickles.

WELSH RAREBIT
(Made with beer)

1 tablespoon butter
1½ pounds cheese, sliced (melting cheese)
1 teaspoon dry mustard
Dash cayenne

Melt butter, then add remaining ingredients. Stir all of the time. Add small amount of beer to prevent burning, about a half pint in all. Serve hot on toast.

PEANUT GINGERBREAD

1 egg
½ cup shortening
½ cup brown sugar
¾ cup molasses
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 cup ground peanuts

Beat eggs well with shortening, brown sugar and molasses and spices. Add milk and flour into which baking powder has been sifted. Add peanuts last and sprinkle top with peanuts. Bake in a hot oven (250 deg. F.) for 20 minutes. Serve plain or with whipped cream.

Nerves On Edge?

WHAT a fascinating person Joyce is since she learned to control her nerves.

On the brink of a breakdown, she consulted a famous nerve specialist. Through him she learned that she could ease tension with a good cry in private, relax her fingers in a hobby, turn her pent-up emotions outward to delight other people.

Our 40-page booklet, HOW TO AVOID AND OVERCOME NERVOUS TROUBLES, gives this physician-psychologist's advice on overcoming worry, irritability, restlessness, insomnia, "quick fatigue," nervous indigestion, vertigo and other nervous ailments.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

WHATEVER YOUR FRAME, YOU

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Copyright, 1937, King Features Synd. Inc.

THE streamlines of 1937 come in all sizes—but not in all shapes! If you are streamlined according to your structure, the effect is beauty. The test is in your measurements.

Charts and tables to the contrary, symmetry cannot be standardized, and there are not rigid rules to govern perfection.

The theory sounds good, but is rarely true, that a 36-inch bust measurement goes with five feet of height, and that the bust should exceed this basic measurement by the same number of inches that the height exceeds five feet.

The variation in perfect bust measurements for figures of the same height can be explained by the difference in chest structure and both measurements are taken. The normal bust measurement may be from one inch to two and one-half inches larger than the chest.

The size of the bust is, of course, affected by total weight and extremes of either underweight or overweight may be accompanied by an abnormal bust contour. This fault may be passably corrected by a return to normal weight. Position of the bust, however, depends as much on the condition of the pectoral muscles, which lift the bust or allow it to droop, as on weight. These muscles may be strengthened through corrective exercise.

The waistline comes next, to your measurement memo. The waist should taper gracefully and, for symmetry, should be at most seven inches smaller than the bust. You can get by with a six inch difference, but Venus' measurements showed a difference of nine inches.

As for the hips, loveliness allows the measurement to be two inches larger than the bust. Any extra hip inches mean a thick, sour figure out of line, whether you are short or tall—although an excessive measurement in the short figure is much more conspicuous than in the tall one.

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

"BOOM . . . CRASH . . . BAM-M-MM!"

Here comes another broadside!

We warned you the youngsters would do it if given the chance. Do what? Smash the "sacred white cows" of convention and set themselves up—or at least dent them badly.

Elsie Robinson

This time it's Mary Ellen Wicker with a broadside at education which she says is "simply terrible"—or at least dent them badly.

Is she pleased at the prospect? Read on! Here's what Mary writes:

"Looking back at my own high school years, and studying the records of the graduates I know, I have come to the conclusion that the value of modern education is vastly over estimated and that it is, in most cases, grossly inadequate for the work it should perform.

"Yes, I've heard the usual stuff about the 'broadening cultural aspects of college life.' Pooh! Anyone with ambition and determination can become equally cultured in the public library, and not waste a lot of money doing it.

"Except as a training for a profession, a college education is worthless!

"Agreed, education teaches one how to think. But why can't they learn to think just as well studying some subject which will be of practical value?

"This is 1937, the streamlined age. Our homes, our lives, our industries are modernized. It's a new world, but we continue to lumber along in a prehistoric educational machine, cramming the craniums of young America with the same stuff that ancient Greeks and Romans considered education.

"Modernize education! Put trades in the high schools. Teach the boys and girls something they can make a living at. Give them a ground course in aviation, or teach them the mechanical intricacies of the modern automobile, radio, steel work, etc. For the girls, besides commercial courses, put greater stress on domestic science—the ultimate goal of every girl is a home of her own—cooking, marketing, budgeting.

"Above all, teach the students practical psychology, how to understand and live congenially with people . . . develop their personalities. Give them a course on marriage (and teach them the true facts about sex).

"It stands to reason that proper education for the all-important career of matrimony would lessen divorce."

That's telling them, Mary Ellen! And dozens of others agreed with you. I'm wondering what the over-30 oldsters think of your reaction. Mother, Dad, Teeter, Taxpayer—each one of you is paying plenty for his educating these youngsters consider an inadequate.

WHAT DO YOU SAY?

Do YOU believe the younger generation's right?

In case Mary Ellen hasn't dragged you out of your ruts, folks, here comes Lillian Grasser with some highly explosive questions. Lillian's tired of hearing youth blamed for everything. So—

"Dear Miss Robinson:

"So our smug, self-righteous elders think the youngsters are to blame for all the devilment? All right, tell me this—

"Who are the crooked lawmakers?

"Who are the big swindlers?

"Who are the grafters?

"Who are the vice-ring leaders?

"Who are the corrupt politicians?

"Who have the sensational divorces?

"Who are the practitioners of free love, on the q. t?

"Are they the 'youngsters' or the oldsters?

"LILLIAN GRASSER,

"Port Washington, Wisconsin."

There! I have a hunch Lillian is laughing THAT one off, little girl!

(Starting Monday, January 25th, the amount of $25 offered weekly for best letters on the problems of youth will be divided into three prizes, two of $10 each as first prizes and, for the runner-up, a second prize of $5. Read the following rules of the contest:

1—The writer of a letter in contest must live within the radius of 25 miles of Boston.

2—The prize must be taken some one time. Prizes cannot be divided.

3—The writer must not exceed 500 words in length.

4—Each letter must give full name and address, and the name of each writer's parent or guardian, if under 21 years.

5—To be eligible for the prize awarded each week, a letter must be one of the preceding Saturday.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Should a Girl in Trouble Be Blamed the Same As the Boy?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

One need not have gray hair to remember the time when, if any girl got into trouble—the convenient phrase for covering the tragedy of the unwed mother—the boy was held to be a scoundrel.

But all that has changed. Girls may "find it all" in despair, families may weep scalding tears of shame, but, according to modern standards, a girl in trouble now-a-days is held as responsible as a boy. The changed verdict of the world is the price we pay for the progress of time. Is it a just price?

Schools, universities, pulpits and press are now engaged in a campaign to dispel ignorance. Once we used to call a lack of biological knowledge "innocence," and regarded it as one of the most beautiful attributes of a young girl.

Today such ignorance is considered as malfeasance as to short-weight and peroddle. We hold womankind to the same book-knowledge requirement that we do men.

One could extract from such a series of the following with deep compassion and sympathy for a girl facing such an ordeal:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I suspected something was wrong with my sister but never dreamed it was as serious as it is. We have been engaged for two years and today I wasn't a bit surprised when she told me that she was in trouble. Imagine my astonishment, however, when she told me that the man responsible for her condition was no other than my own father! Of course, I did not let her know I was aware of the fact, but I am going to have it out with him. I am not going to marry him, of course, but I feel that I owe it to my sister to make him do the right thing by her. Please tell me what you think I should do.

ANGRY.

Before attempting to answer your letter let us hope that it may serve as a warning to each reader of this column against letting a girl have an evening off.

And as for you, don't see why you must apply the remedy known as "straight talk."

The fact is, however, that the first indictment that can be taken to the young man that in so really approaches his most serious offense is a little more than brazen vanity.

As against who imagines a girl can be kept in the house every evening in the week, may be given comfort.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you please tell me what to do about this persistent pest.

TO GET RID.

DEAR "FRANTIC":

Before attempting to answer your letter let us hope that it may serve as a warning to each reader of this column against letting a girl have an evening off.

And as for you, don't see why you must apply the remedy known as "straight talk."

The fact is, however, that the first indictment that can be taken to the young man that in so really approaches his most serious offense is a little more than brazen vanity.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Imagine my astonishment, however, when she told me that the man responsible for her condition was no other than my own father! I am not going to marry him, of course, but I feel that I owe it to my sister to make him do the right thing by her. Please tell me what you think I should do.

ANGRY.

At least I did, and for me could save him a most unfortunate change, but I put it down to imagination. How could he change, when every moment was as sacred as if they had been made in fourth dozen all put friends?

"Each of us will be happier with someone more in keeping with our manner. Ours was a perfect love of early youth, and we will be happier to remember it that way than if we tried to keep what is gone."

If I ever wanted a friend! As if there could be a time in my whole life when I needed friendship more than now! My beloved—the only person I could call so. If I had to do, or say anything to prevent my losing him for help.

"The letter was just one of the hundreds which come in this column. We can only here be the best we can, because that would be for you, because and myself.

"Forgiveness!" It is the noblest quality, surely, to which we can aspire. Only to forgive is to become godlike, and it would not will. Unless it were to forgive the unforgivable, the unthinkable, which took back to the beginning, is You KNEW.

Perhaps you have had the power of choice—but what does the power of choice bring?

There is one true purpose of the new deal in death.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

There are those men in society, and all of them want to marry me. Each has a good point, but he has a good one. He likes me, and I care for him, but no one of them is the one I would choose because he loved anything.

The one man of eight years' standing I do not love, and I don't see him often. I like him, but not love him. My parents want me to marry him, because he is well off.

The third man is very handsome, but he is not well off, and if I marry him he will stop drinking altogether.

If possible don't like him at all. He seems to think I cannot make a decision.

LOST.

MY DEAR GIRL:

Please don't be a girl and make a decision from Miss or Mrs. unless you really and truly do love one man more than the other two.

Why not wait and see if, under your influence, he does not become more successful.

To my way of thinking, the others do not matter, unless they can come through some time of them.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

When we came to see me only once a week, I used to count the days, and when he came to see me twice a week I was delighted, but now that he insists upon spending every evening with me I am bored to death.

Not that he is objectionable, because he takes me to the movies, theaters, restaurants, dances.

I just don't seem to be able to get away from him. I feel that something in a cage. He calls me up early in the morning, and if I am not at an engagement for that evening, he rings it before the hour started.

He monopolizes my time of my life, and insists upon walking home with me. He sends me flowers—I don't want them.

Short of moving to another city, or having him found dead to keep the peace, I don't know what to do about this persistent pest.

TO GET RID.

Magic Hair Curler

POSED BY SHIRLEY ROSS

By ARLINE GOULD

ALL THROUGH life we've been wanting and waiting some magic indestructible gadget that would end forever such things as straggly hair ends and unruly, wind-tossed curls.

We got our wish—yes, actually, last fall—when a far-sighted manufacturer brought forth a simple automatic hair curler, a device that created almost magically a glorious headful of firm, cyclone-resisting curls.

And it's the simplicity of the principle that's so amazing. Just wind your hair around the curler, clamp down the lever and your soul was this affair. It was indeed delightfully simple. Well we took it home and tried it out, as I shall tell you about it. Remember, I'm not one person there that thing ever did work, but it HAS. It now has a habit brushed and it's ex-traordinary how much it looks like it is ESPECIALLY for those in-determined curls around the face, which give softness to any coiffure and the unbecoming ones at the back of the head, which are so perplexing to keep in order.

Between curls in the hair-dresser on for the girl who takes time to do her own hair, these curlers are indispensable. Set your curls beautifully, grasshold and complete "curl control" at all times.

The large one curler makes curls, lots of them, small, new, off-the-face ones to perfection. The junior one supplies the finishing touch by curling the short ends around the face or at the back of the head for a sheer-bob. It is particularly recommended for very short hair.

The curlers work as simply as easily, it literally seems like magic. A bob-pin is inserted in the end—the curler clamped on a few strands of hair—a twist of the wrist and you have your curl where you want it, held securely in place by the bob-pin, which is cleverly HIDDEN under the curl.

Dons any longer every other woman their small "bob-dos." Equipped with this curler you can always keep your hair looking professionally dressed with a minimum of expense and trouble.

The curler does not need to be definitely and mounted with it are two dozen bob-pins made of high tempered steel, which will not rust, smooth, no matter how wherely you use and curl your hair and bob-pins these are made from a special white oil to drying. After the curls are dry you may leave them in these are so comb them out look lovely, natural-looking waves.

To learn the name and price of this miraculous curler earlier for those little sculptured curls around the ears and for trouble-some short ends at the neck, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, including a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

CHAPTER 197

IN THE words of a dear old woman I once knew, "the sight almost left my eyes," as a team, drawing a loaded wagon came through a gate a little way beyond the car.

Mechanically, my hand went to the horn, but Williams' frantic adjuration stopped the pressure of my fingers upon the button just in time.

CAR MISSES WAGON

I could see now what the small boys were doing, and had no longer any misgivings left in me. There was one fleeting, climaxed instant of terror, when it seemed to me that the car had hit the slowly moving wagon.

"I've got to!" Williams said, but not to me, as he spoke. The car stood leaped forward in a flash, was squeezing between Frederick's wagon, putting his foot down on the accelerator and seeing it through.

ACCELERATOR JAMS

"Give her the gas," Williams said loudly, "I was afraid of this. That accelerator's jammed!"

THANK-YOU NOTE

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Recently I lost a valuable insurance book. It was returned to the insurance company by a person whom I do not know. I have this person's address, and I would like to write her a letter of thanks. Will you kindly tell me how to write this letter?

D.

Your letter might read:

Dear Mrs. Brown:

My insurance company has told me of your great kindness in returning my insurance book to them, and I do want to tell you of my deep gratitude to you. I appreciate so much your thoughtfulness in returning this book, which was most valuable to me. You did an "unknown friend" a most friendly deed and I thank you most heartily for the trouble that you took and for your great courtesy.

Best wishes to you, Mrs. Brown, and again thanks.

Most sincerely yours,

LEWIS HANEY ON STOCKS

Bull Market

RESUMPTION SEEN

In Near Future

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics New York University)

New York, Jan. 11 — The long and the short of the stock market performance during the past two months is just about this:

It has appraised and discounted several serious threats and has come to the conclusion that the chances favor a continuation of the bull market.

Beginning in November, stocks were sold by some insiders and by large investment concerns. Most of those did not believe that the bull market was over. They merely anticipated a large reaction and saw the possibility of even greater risks.

There were war risks, labor risks, credit tightening risks, and political demagogery risk.

So the market averages suggest gradualness and irregularity until the 21st of December.

Since then, the market has pointed upward and by so doing indicated that the net balance of judgment on the part of the more important buyers and sellers of stock is bullish.

An examination of the general situation makes certain conclusions seem to be fairly probable.

1—A good deal of irregularity, with short up and down swings and shifting of leadership, is probable. There are several important uncertainties, which are bound to make occasional sinking spells.

2—For a short time, so called "selectivity" is apt to prevail. Commodity price movements, strike developments, and political activity will cause quick shifts of interest.

3—The general trend, however, will probably be upward, and this will probably be true shortly because growing credit inflation makes stocks more attractive than money or fixed incomes.

4—My guess is that a fairly sustained upward path will soon become apparent, with the market reactions checked at successively high levels.

Just at present, many stocks are in process of negotiating the levels from which they were dislodged during December. This may well require some backing and filling, especially with so many sources of "news" in operation in Spain, Detroit, and Washington.

It is strongly indicated, however, that the final outcome will be favorable to stockholders.

When I say "strongly indicated," I mean that both market action and economic logic lead to the same conclusion.

As to market action, for example, the Saturday closing was distinctly firm and indicative of ability to absorb offerings.

All "gaps" have been filled and the averages have been established well above the trouble area of December 16-30.

The volume of trading since January 2 has favored the rise.

Activity as clearly on the up side again. A perfect days-to-day trading score in the 20 most active stocks would have grossed 4 points last week. All of the dozen most active stocks were gainers. (Utilities, motors and oils were most notable among them.)

A majority of all issues traded in moved up on each of the last five trading days.

Despite the irregularity and reactions of the past week, the market has not yet lost its upward momentum. The action is similar to that of the first half of 1928. At such times, the needed technical corrections are made by means of minor and temporary reactions.

The situation is like early 1928, too, in that the yield of good bonds is relatively low compared with time money rates.

But this probably means now, as it did then, that with the eventual return in money rates, the bull market in stocks is so well started that it will not be stopped.

Business prospects now seem to favor, especially, such industries as the following: Machinery, railway equipment and appliances, metals and raw sugar. Probably building supplies, airplane and oil issues will do well.

The chief points are these: (1) Buy only what you can afford to pay for; (2) Buy on reactions or quiet spots; (3) Buy on the basis of good information as to earnings available per share of stock. (If you don't understand these points fully, you probably don't know enough about the market to warrant buying any stock at all.)

N. HAVEN Outlook BRIGHT

BUCKLAND GIVES VIEWS

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 11 (AP)—E. G. Buckland, chairman of the board of directors, said today the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad needs only a "reasonable prosperity to show its old time strength."

Buckland blamed government control beginning in 1917 for the railroad's present insolvency, in an address before the Hartford Rotary Club.

"It would have emerged solvent and triumphant," the speaker said in referring to the road, "if government had, in the exercise of its great power of government operation, kept the faith and fulfilled the promise to manage the property as economically and efficiently as it was managed when taken over."

"The New Haven was strong enough to have weathered the storm and saved its stockholders and bondholders if it had been allowed to work out its salvation without government compulsion of forced sales and separation."

Investments

Buckland charged that all losses "from unwise investments would have been successfully borne if the director general had kept the promise made by the President of the United States when he took over the railroads at the end of 1917."

Referring to the future of rail transportation in this country, the speaker said:

"We also have to do with that industry have no fear.

"Today the railroads, even though many may be in process of reorganization through bankruptcy, are conservatively capitalized and economically managed.

Rail Values

"As proof I cite that the value of all railroad property as found by the Interstate Commerce Commission plus actual cash invested since the I. C. C. valuation is more than twenty-four billion dollars."

He pointed out that with return to conditions which existed in the first years of the century railroads will require at least $722,000,000 for non-competitive traffic.

"It is ultra-conservative to consider that with the return of business the railroads will benefit to the extent of $1,000,000,000 increase in gross freight revenue if business is restored only to the status of 1930," Buckland said.

BONDS STAGE COMEBACK

New York, N. Y., Jan. 11 (Special)—Boston's financial prestige "comeback" during the last four years is cited today in the third edition of the New York Chemical Bank and Trust Company's annual year-end price-yield survey of the municipal bond market.

The survey reveals that the prices of Boston's 4 per cent bonds, due in 1959, moved from 92½ in December, 1933, to 110 a year later for a gain of 17½ points, to 112 in December, 1935, up 2 points and to 121⅜ in December, 1936, a further gain of 9⅜.

The yield on Boston's bonds moving inversely to price declined from 4.50 in December, 1933, to 3.40 to 3.25 and 2.70 in succeeding years.

The study by the statistical department of the noted Wall Street institution, whose assets at the end of December were listed at $686,675,710.36 covered 191 representative issues and affords an unusually comprehensive picture of the broad upward trend of the past few years.

* * *

"Prices of prime bonds," the survey states, "are seen to have reached further record levels in 1936, while second grade bonds are shown to have experienced considerably sharper increases. As a result of the relatively greater recoveries in individual credit standing resulting from improvement in tax collections, progress in balancing budgets, some debt readjustments, and, in a few cases, actual debt reductions."

* * *

In an added study the bank has selected 20 long-term bonds of cities covering practically every section of the country in order to arrive at a general average of the year advances. According to this average prices moved from 92¼ in December, 1935, to 108¾ a year later for a gain of 16½ points to 117⅝ in December, 1936, up 8¾ points, and 12¼ in December, 1936, a further gain of 7⅞ points, the comparisons upwards reveling a distinct flattening out of the trajectory of rising prices. Average yield, moving inversely to price, declined from 3.18 per cent in December, 1935, to 2.44 3.15 and 2.05 per cent in succeeding years.

Advertising Drops

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP)—Advertising Age reported today that retail advertising placed in the newspapers by the merchants of 68 major cities for the week ended Jan. 2, was 5.8 per cent below the corresponding week of 1936 year.

The total was 11,983,430 lines compared with 12,716,123 last year.

DISAGREEMENTS

Canadian Finances

The budget report of the Dominion Government of Canada for the six months ended September 30, shows a net improvement of $37,600,000 over the corresponding period in 1935.

Expenditures in the first six months of the 1935 fiscal year amounted to $211,691,000 and revenues totaled $199,091,000, leaving a deficit of $12,600,000 for the half year.

Expenditures in the first half of this year were $2,513,000 less than in 1935 and revenues increased $34,749,000 over the 1935 revenues.

The net improvement in the first six months of this year wiped out the deficit of $37,600,000 that occurred in the first six months of last year and left a surplus of $4,600,000.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Jan. 11—Wall Street brokerage board rooms this past week failed to show any uneasiness over the General Motors strike situation.

Stocks held at high levels and slowly moved upward. Buying was brisk. Firm members had an answer for every question which might cast a despairing cloud over the securities picture. Some of the more serious broke as follows:

That the General Motors strike was "good news," for it would enable dealers to reduce unwieldy stocks of second-hand cars that have been mounting ever since the 1937 models were introduced. Regarding the cutting of steel orders by the auto makers they pointed out that the steel companies had enough business on hand to keep them at 80 per cent capacity operations throughout the first quarter. Easing of auto industry demands, they argued, would enable the steel companies to "get their second wind" and in part go ahead to help bolster sales by other than automotive users.

* * *

Now all-time peaks are being forecast for the following: 1937 Electric power output, gas, passenger travel and air express shipments.

* * *

Aluminum 1936 $1 Net Is Seen

Aluminum Co. of America through the wider use of aluminum in the progressing industrial recovery, has been showing sharp gains in net earnings. About one-half of the total domestic supply of aluminum is manufactured by this company. For the year 1936, the company will show net earnings equal to around $4 a share on common stock, against 55 cents in 1935, according to street sources.

* * *

Realty Earnings May Aid Central

New York Central Railroad's final net income figures for 1936 may be made somewhat larger when earnings from real estate properties, hotel leases, etc., are finally computed, it was indicated yesterday. Without giving effect to such possible net gains, the carrier is expected to show earnings of around $3.75 a common share for 1936, against 2 cents in 1935.

* * *

Premiums for Oil Reported in Texas

Although the Barnsdall and the Continental Oil Companies are the only major refining units which have officially advanced their buying prices for midcontinent crude oil, private reports yesterday from the East Texas field credit some pipe lines as purchasers for both major and minor refiners, with paying premiums over posted prices for oil. The extent of the premiums was not specified, but observers in the field regarded their existence as a sign that other refiners would soon follow the advance initiated by Continental.

WASHINGTON AIDS

Capitol INSPIRING Optimism

By B. C. FORBES

The financial and business worlds are heartened by President Roosevelt's opening message to Congress and by his budget outline.

Stocks closed the week with net gains averaging fully three points. Bonds also advanced.

This was accomplished despite daily closings of automotive plants and absence of encouraging news concerning any prospective settlement of the demands made by John L. Lewis.

No intimation of President Roosevelt's stand reached Wall Street before the stock exchange week ended. Definite news from that quarter is awaited with intense interest, not to say curiosity.

Some satisfaction was derived by the investment community from the withdrawal of the previous stipulation by the strikers' leaders that all bargaining must be done with their union alone. This was interpreted as indicating that the members throwing in their lot with the Lewis faction had not come up to expectations.

* * *

Meanwhile, it is noted that at certain plants those deprived of employment against their will are taking steps to make their desire to work clearly known. This phase is counted upon to become more pronounced as more factories cease operations—and wage paying.

All in all, the preponderance of opinion currently reflected by the security markets is that the final outcome will not be disastrous to further companies.

Threats of union warfare against the steel industry have not yet developed into aggressive action. Leading steel manufacturers have let it be known that they will sign compromisingly oppose having their plants "closed" against all but members of national unions and that they mean to continue relationships with plant unions.

* * *

Although the dislocation already caused by the strikes is already severe, it is confined to certain industry and injurious in many directions, including transportation, the upto-date record of last week shows no sign of abatement in the country as a whole.

The steel industry has become still more active. Railway traffic is running 8¾ per cent ahead of 12 weeks ago that cost $10 billion or more. It exempts building contractors and open market purchases.

The four-year-old 30-hour week bill again will be up for consideration.

Going to the people with a constitutional amendment that would give Congress authority to fix wages and set hours has been suggested by Senator Ashurst and Senate Floor Leader Robinson.

* * *

The commodity price trend shows firmness.

One incident of the week was a gain of $45,000 in the value of stock exchange seats since the beginning of last month.

The picture of the nation's financial prompts naturally why President Roosevelt is distinctly bright. He figures upon very substantial expansion in public revenue as the fruit of waxing economic recovery, upon steady decrease in relief expenditures (through increasing re-employment, and upon an early end to the piling up of additional federal debt.

His calculations admittedly are optimistic.

The hopeful deduction drawn by men of affairs is that President Roosevelt means to pursue policies calculated to improve confidence, improve business, improve employment.

IN CONGRESS

Major Law Plans in Debate

By GENE ROBB
Special to Boston Evening American

Washington, Jan. 11 — Sharp undercover disagreement which shortly will flare up in the open already are developing in Congress on questions of how to reach the major objectives hung on its calendar.

The administration's "must" list for the seventy-fifth session consists of objectives rather than specific bills recommended to accomplish them.

Along with this departure from previous policy is noted a tendency to reach the objectives by piecemeal legislation, several proposals instead of a single blanket law like the national recovery act.

This situation is producing conflicting plans to provide minimum wages and set maximum hours in industry. A variety of ideas have been advanced to extend federal regulation of trade. How to follow a tapering-off policy in connection with relief remains undetermined. Farm groups are at odds over questions of benefit payments, crop insurance and acreage control.

Wages and Hours

Five ways for fixing minimum wages and maximum hours will vie for congressional favor. Increasing interest is centering on the O'Mahoney bill which would require all interstate corporations to hold federal licenses containing wage and hour guarantees.

Amendments will be offered to the Walsh-Healey bill to give the Department of Labor authority to regulate working conditions and wages of every company which does any business with the government. This government-contract NRA now applies only to firms selling at least that cost $10,000 or more. It exempts building contractors and open market purchases.

The four-year-old 30-hour week bill again will be up for consideration.

Going to the people with a constitutional amendment that would give Congress authority to fix wages and set hours has been suggested by Senator Ashurst and Senate Floor Leader Robinson.

Trade Regulation

The Supreme Court is credited with offering an involved but possible method of fixing wages and hours by its decision last week upholding the Ashurst-Sumners act. Wage and hour matters would be determined by State laws protected through federal legislation that barred the shipment of products produced by sweatshop labor.

Dilemma confronting exponents of further government trade regulation is how to strengthen anti-trust laws and at the same time fix minimum prices to protect business from price-cutters.

Comments of Brokers

In the trade and industry we would view such recession that appear as opportunities to buy, to trading commitments. R. S. Ferguson, Prentiss Brayton & Brady.

It is during movements of the current type that opportunities for quick, forth trading profits are usually most attractive. However, a selective trading program, instead of a general policy of accumulation is advocated during the early stages of the advance, in anticipation of what is occurring now, which is strictly adhered to.—J. F. Mahon, Hornblower & Weeks.

Am inclined to the view that stocks may work lower in the early early this week.—H. D. Comer, Paine, Webber & Co.

Until there is more definite threat to further recovery than exists at the moment any period of active setback that develops will afford opportunity for renewed bull buying.—J. P. Maher, Shields & Co.

WHEAT PRICES Have Setback

Chicago, Jan. 11 (AP)—Wheat prices were unchanged to a material extent early today after a sharp break that only follow Saturday's advance into the highest levels since Liverpool and Chicago quotations had not only followed the upward course of the domestic market but had been bolstered by the strength of the Argentine markets.

Opening 1 cent off to ¾ up, May 1.20¾-⅞, and July new 1.05¾, and afterward showed a general decline.

THE GERMAN NAZI DAILY "ANGRIFF," whose bombastic title in English translation means Attack, or Assault, or Invasion, snarls editorial outrage against U. S. The Angriff labels the boycott as the "malicious and crazy instigation of the most iniquitous Jews in New York."

SCHMELING DESERVES HIS CHANCE

PERSONALLY, MIND YOU, I DON'T WANT to see Braddock beat Schmeling, either, though for different reasons than the social and political ones given by the anti-Nazi attorneys. INNOCENT TO SUFFER WITH GUILTY

I APPRECIATE THAT THE BOYCOTTERS cannot see the sporting rights of the individual because of the hatred borne by Nazi-ism that envelops him, also that their demonstration against so pleasure a matter as a prize fight as a symbol of larger protest. Still, indignation, if prolonged, becomes a mania which is capable of destroying innocents for the sake of punishing the guilty.

FRED HOEY Writes:

INTERFERENCE AS AN ART | RIBBING RIVALS FLOURISHES

Hello, everybody, this is Fred Hoey speaking.

Interference constitutes a delicate question in baseball just as much as it does in professional hockey. You and I have seen many interference plays occur in baseball. Players are taught to break up double plays. The front runner occupies the same position as the interferers in football. It's up to him to take out the infielder covering second base, the pivot man of the play. The safest way of taking him out is to bowl him over and this often happens

Fred Hoey

Breaking up a double play is an art. We have observed clever runners like Mickey Cochrane, Lyn Lary, Arky Vaughan and Paul Waner do a very neat job in taking out the pivot man. Then, too, we have seen players like Bill Jurges of the Chicago Cubs a bit raw in their work. I saw Jurges crash into Bill Urbanski of the Bees on two occasions in one game and Bill had the ball on second for the forceout long before Jurges reached there. The second time Jurges hit Bill he was a bit vicious. Urbanski was so burned up that for a few minutes it looked like a scrap on the field.

Johnny Kroner of the Red Sox is a registered pharmacist. We'd hate to pick up the paper and read, "Druggist Kroner severed a vein filling a prescription for a roast beef sandwich."

Ribbing or riding opponents during a game is another art. It can be clean, wholesome and witty and then again it can be made sarcastic, brutal and personal. The latter class promotes hard feeling and sometimes serious trouble. Baseball has produced some great ribbers. Off hand I recall among the best, Arlie Latham, Kid Gleason, Germany Schaefler and Wilbart Robinson who have passed on. Among the later riders who are standouts are Rabbit Maranville, Dizzy Dean and Fresco Thompson.

"Your think are out of order, it is my duty to assist the blind."

The Sixth Great Release in the Sensational Offer of Fine Books to Readers of the

BOSTON AMERICAN

"The Greatest Story That America Has Produced"

Nathaniel Hawthorne, by common consent is the greatest American writer of fiction and "The Scarlet Letter" is generally considered his finest work. It is a simple yet powerfully dramatic and intensely interesting study of the concealment of sin—it presents, more vividly than any history, an intimate New England Puritan life with its moral intensity and sensitivity to the unseen powers . . . a book which belongs on every home book shelf.

Booming Sunday Advertiser Campaign

MARSHAL WILLIAM J. MURPHY THOMAS SHULMAN

City Marshal Murphy of Brockton tells Thomas Shulman of the Boston Sunday Advertiser that he heartily indorses this newspaper's home delivery newsboy campaign. Marshal Murphy said he considers a newsboy's work of great value as a training for life.

MURPHY LAUDS HOME DRIVE

City Marshal William J. Murphy of Brockton today added his voice to those of city officials praising the Boston Sunday Advertiser Newsboy Campaign, and I hope many Brockton boys will take advantage of the opportunity and join their organization," he said.

"Back in 1895, I was a newsboy and I remember having my first bicycle from the money I earned on my paper route.

"I know many of our great business men were former newsboys, and I know they will agree with me that this newspaper work is a great character builder.

"I also believe the business training they receive selling papers helps the boys in school activities."

Marshal Murphy is the second public official to express enthusiasm on the subject of newsboy training. Governor Hurley recently declared the Boston Sunday Advertiser newsboy campaign to be worthy of support by the public generally.

Boston Sunday Advertiser newsboys are now delivering papers in 38 cities and towns in Eastern Massachusetts.

Twice 'Dead' Baby Still Frolicking

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 11 (AP)—Two years ago he died by all tokens as 18-months-old baby placed happily on the floor of her home school room, but today, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Kingsmill remained skeptical.

Public health officers attached to institutions and agencies investigating all deaths. Each time she was pronounced dead her parents had a private funeral and interment with only a few friends present.

"It seems like a miracle to us," the father commented. "We can't believe it's true that she's all right."

Japanese Red Plotters Indicted

Tokyo, Jan. 11 (AP)—Fifteen persons were indicted today on charges of having planned an armed revolution last August to create a Soviet government. Seven others were indicted but will be tried soon police announced today.

Those indicted were charged with conspiracy to start revolutionary movements, a "nationwide strike" and disorders in the provinces to aid Japanese communist organizations.

Al Woods' Story in Cosmopolitan

His latest film producing "flair," temperamentally, his comeback—the twice-daily plans of a celebrity, his fourth marriage to Mildred Harris, "The Night of June 13th."

The last guy incidentally drew Hollywood's attention to Doris Nolan, the producer's opinion now definitely on her way to stardom in Universal pictures.

He thought Ronald Colman was "just fair" to appear convincing as a leading man.

He said Eva LaGallienne be enough on the drama farm to attract calling skins the theater.

DAY OF THEATRICAL TROUPERS NOT OVER

Traveling Actors Still Visit Small Towns

In spite of popular opinion and the comedian may be lost to the contrary, there are still a great many small theatrical companies touring all over the United States, playing in tents, halls, smaltimes theatres and country opera houses.

These small-town travelling companies are generally organizations, depending entirely upon receipts each day for their existence.

Bookings are usually from one night to one week and shows are seldom booked ahead for more than three weeks. The actors usually do their duties besides their acting on the stage, and on tuition is usually on the co-operative plan all the way through. The leading man, for instance, may be the agent for the show.

Warner Oland A Versatile Person

Warner Oland, famous for his Charlie Chan character, is a very versatile individual. He speaks several languages and is a successful playwright, one of the screen's greatest character actors, a great golfer, a farmer, a breeder and a horticulturist.

Warner was born in a small Swedish town in the land of the midnight sun 55 years ago. His parents were of Russian and Swedish extraction, which accounts for the Oriental slant of Oland's eyes.

His family moved to a farm in Connecticut, where Warner taught himself to speak English.

He made his picture debut in 1915 in "Pilgrim's Progress" and he has been in pictures ever since.

He uses no makeup for his characterization of Charlie Chan. The most he does is to dye his hair he wears, but he grows the goatee before each picture.

He was married in 1908 and, strange as it seems, he and his wife are still very happy.

The famous character actor is one of Hollywood's richest actors. He lives in Santa Barbara, a millionaire community.

Fictionization OF THE Modern Era

(A book review of "Jill Somerset" by Alice Waugh Farrar & Rinehart, 1936.)

Alec, younger of the celebrated Waugh brothers, proceeds to be as British as possible in his newest story, that of Jill Somerset and Vincent, a dependable, prosy businessman whom she could not "adore." Then Jill, true to form, falls desperately in love with Grant Wilson, Vincent's friend. Vincent, she cannot taste at all because she loves honor best.

Jill has a little brother, Hor, who grows to be a fascist; sister Cynthia, who grows to be a bespectacled Marxist, and a passionate sister Beryl, widowed by war at 17 and bitter toward her fellows.

Spanish CITY Ruined BY WAR

Remembering Barcelona the beautiful in June of 1929, at the time of the visit of the U. S. S. Florida on its midshipmen's cruise, I find it impossible to picture it as it is today—its imposing churches sacked, its beautiful buildings bullet-shattered, windows broken, telephone and trolley wires down, trees destroyed, the long streets stained with blood.

In 1929 Barcelona was famed as the Paris of the South. The city lies between two mountains of hills and was then a serene and lovely sight from our ship in the harbor. Its wide promenade where one could sit for hours watching the throngs that passed types that are seen nowhere else in the world; its cafes where people lounged and ate, cheerful and romantic in the eyes of visitors from the States; historic churches, modern and old-fashioned villas, new factories—all were wrapped in serenity and peace.

While there, we enjoyed the attractions of an International Exposition which was a sight to behold: colored lights on waters flowing over man-made falls, buildings that for beauty and architecture could not be seen the world over, authentic Spanish villages where one could purchase lovely articles beyond description. The cabarets did not close until 4 a. m. and we often wondered when the people did their sleeping.

Now those interesting sights have disappeared; Barcelona has undergone the throes of revolution and civil war. It must be sad for those who love her to look upon the ruins wrought by vandal hands. It is sad to look back upon all that beauty and think it is no more.

Hockey of today is a was a hockey team of great sport, but hockey as it was played several decades ago was probably greater.

In the days of seven-man hockey teams a game consisted of two 30-minute periods of fast, furious skating and hard body-checking. Substitutions were seldom made, with a manager being considered very lucky indeed if his club contained a couple of spares.

Guest Leaves; Man's Smile Ceases

(A SHORT STORY)

The other day I visited Chet, one of my old cronies. Both of us were having a pleasant time, drinking, smoking and laughing boisterously, when suddenly a knock was heard at the front door.

"Excuse me," Chet said, walking the never ran to the door.

When he opened it, a little man, carrying a cane and wearing a curled mustache, made his appearance at the portal.

Chet almost shook the poor fellow's hand off. He clasped and slapped him on the back with forceful and enthusiastic strokes, and told him over and over again how glad he was to see him. Then, encircling his arm around the fellow's shoulders, he escorted him over to where I sat.

"I want you to meet Monsieur Carpet, one of my closest friends," said Chet, his red face wreathed in smiles.

The evening passed away with more drinking, more smoking and more laughing, until finally Flaubert departed, but not before Chet had valiantly pleaded with him to stay longer.

Now that we were alone, Chet turned to me and said, "I never did like that guy."

A Disappointing Budget Outlook

THE ONLY possible interpretation that can be put upon the President's budget message is that WE ARE NOT GOING TO HAVE A BALANCED BUDGET.

The message is deeply disappointing, in its complete omission of any foundation for hope for anything closer to financial stability than Mr. Roosevelt has hitherto given us.

Mr. Roosevelt is simply using the old Hoover phraseology of a mythical balanced budget "JUST AROUND THE CORNER."

We have never turned that corner, and we never will if the measure of the Roosevelt method is in his present budget message.

The real prospect, the DISCOURAGING prospect, in the message is that the nation can only expect FURTHER RECKLESS SPENDING, a permanently UNBALANCED budget, and a CONSTANTLY INCREASING NATIONAL DEBT.

* * *

THE only fragment of a suggestion offered by the President in the direction of reducing the COST of government as an IMPLEMENT OF BALANCE is the promise that he will shortly submit a program "placing the executive branch of the government on a sounder and more responsible basis of management."

But he hastens on to warn that only fractional economies will be thus effected.

In its entirety, the Roosevelt expectation of bringing Federal revenues into balance with expenditures is based upon the ability of private industry to contribute INCREASED revenues to the government and to take relief burdens off of the government.

If the prosperity of industry is so important to the President's future program, it would be reasonable to expect his administration to deal MORE SYMPATHETICALLY with industry than it is now doing.

* * *

IT is hardly debatable that much of the avoidable and destructive disturbance now bringing employing industries to a standstill is being engineered by people inspired by the belief, if not the fact, that they have comfort in government circles.

The unpleasant actualities of the present industrial situation impose vast clouds upon the horizon.

Strikes and threats of strikes are menacing wide sections of the industrial and employment fronts.

The rate of economic improvement that has been in evidence CANNOT POSSIBLY CONTINUE with industry and labor locked in senseless controversy.

Paralyzed industry, idle workers, stoppage of production and of utilization of materials COMPLETELY OBSTRUCT the way to the higher revenues and re-employment which the President so fondly envisions.

Dr. Conant's Rebuke

HARVARD PRESIDENT JAMES B. CONANT, invited by Wisconsin Governor Philip A. LaFollette to inquire into the fitness of Dr. Glenn Frank, the University of Wisconsin's deposed president, declines and offers, instead, to investigate the LaFollette politically-controlled Board of Regents.

It is a stinging rebuke that Dr. Conant gives the Wisconsin Governor, but, nonetheless, a deserved one.

Specifically, the ouster of Dr. Frank is a Wisconsin affair, with the recent "public hearing" seemingly a purely local political controversy.

But as far as education as a whole is concerned, the ouster is legitimately a NATIONAL event.

More, it is a notorious example of the ruinous effects of political meddling with schools and colleges.

This fact, in all probability, prompted Dr. Conant's offer to investigate what he terms the "suspicion of political control."

The Wisconsin hearing given Dr. Frank was obviously a useless gesture. It was held in an atmosphere precluding all possibility of determining his real capacity as an educator.

To eight of the fifteen members of the Board of Regents who sought his removal from the beginning, he was a "POLITICAL UNDESIRABLE."

Throughout the farcical proceedings his status did not change.

The REAL victim of the procedure, unfortunately, is the University itself.

Students are resentful, apparently convinced that politicians have deprived the school of capable leadership.

Their parents and the people of Wisconsin naturally realize the hopeless division of the Board of Regents obstructs the effectiveness of the institution.

And the nation at large cannot but feel that the educational standing of the University, raised to a high peak under Dr. Frank, has been lowered by the dictatorial LaFollette political regime that caused his removal.

Whole State Benefits

MASSACHUSETTS auto-mobile registrations have reached a new January high mark, 50,000 more than ever before.

The increase, according to Commissioner Francis J. DeCelles, is a direct result of the lower compulsory insurance rates.

People can now afford to drive their cars during the whole year, instead of storing them and deferring registration to April 1.

The situation is a good one; the entire State benefits.

More cars mean more happiness for their owners, their families and friends; more jobs for persons employed in the automobile industry, plus a general improvement in gasoline and accessory sales.

Bringing prices within the ability of the people to pay them is always the preferable policy. There is proof in the increased automobile registration.

A Stoughton Tragedy

THE nation's most sorrowful bride lives in Stoughton. She is Mrs. Florence E. Alden, whose husband of 16 months, Frank, is held as an escaped convict from Idaho State Prison.

At the home of her parents, young Mrs. Alden sits, crying:

"I just can't believe it! It can't be true. I can't believe it. I never had another fellow."

IT IS true, authorities claim. And Frank himself is said to admit he's the man who fled from the Western prison after serving three years of a life sentence on charges of kidnaping and aiding in robbery.

The heart of all New England goes out to young Mrs. Alden, blameless in this unfortunate circumstance.

For her love and trust she pays a terrible price, as women so often do.

Maine's Good Fortune

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in his budget message, asks Congress to appropriate $47,710 to carry on work in Maine's Acadia National Park.

This money, small in comparison with the billions that will be raised and spent, means much to New England.

Our newest and fastest growing industry is our recreational business that brings thousands annually to this section from all parts of the nation. Consequently an expenditure that promises to improve that industry should be encouraged.

Another Flood Threatens

NEW HAMPSHIRE is issues a warning of interest to all New England.

It concerns the danger of another severe flood, due probably on the anniversary of wide devastation of last Spring.

Commenting on the situation, Claude Swain, New Hampshire public service commissioner, points to lakes already above normal levels and rivers swollen by recent rains.

Perhaps all we can do now is cross our fingers and hope for the best. But, eventually, there should be an ADEQUATE program of flood control, embracing all New England.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

Attorney-General Cummings, in his annual report, makes some important suggestions for improving criminal law enforcement. He would permit a defendant to waive indictment by a grand jury and be prosecuted by information; permit comment on the failure of a defendant to testify; allow a wife to testify against her husband or a husband to testify against his wife in a criminal trial; require notice of an alibi defense before trial. Adoption of these recommendations would materially facilitate the administration of justice.

Registration of pistols and revolvers would "place a potent weapon against crime in the hands of law enforcement officers" as the Attorney General says, and along with the registration of the owners and these weapons there should be fired a test bullet from each of these weapons. Each pistol and revolver leaves its own individual markings upon every bullet fired from it.

War risk insurance rates for shipping in the Spanish zone have gone up. Rates on British vessels have gone up to 1 per cent, and 2½ per cent increase in the net work. Rates on Spanish ships have jumped to 5 per cent. Spain has a very worth while something. The strength of the British navy is proverbial. Just as we admire a man or department holds down fire insurance rates, so the ability of a nation to protect its shipping entitles it to more favorable war risk insurance rates.

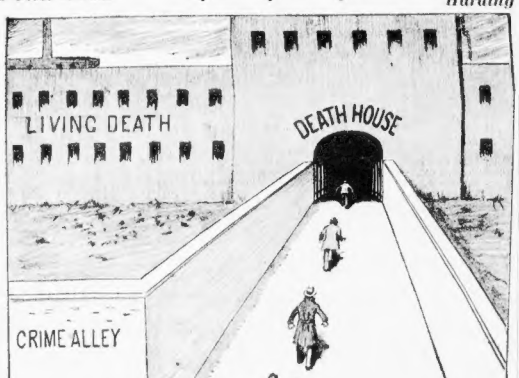
The argument sometimes is advanced that the United States should not take advantage of the money in armaments because we are in no immediate danger of attack from any source, but no one knows when that danger may arise. And now, more than ever, it is important to be prepared. When the next war comes there will be no time to get ready for it. Ammunition cannot be built and pilots trained over night. Waiting until war is declared to build up defenses is like waiting until a conflagration starts to organize a fire department.

While we are preparing to defend ourselves against attack from the outside, it would be wise to take some precautions against the spread of industrial strife which already has developed in this country. When two individuals disagree, they are not permitted to resort to brute force to settle their differences. They go into court and have their dispute adjudicated in an orderly manner.

A Wisconsin congressman has sensibly suggested he will introduce a bill to bar from the mails all literature and pamphlets used in strike work. Postmaster General Farley won't like that. Straw votes, parcels postal, revenues which cannot be considered objectionable by any department that runs "in the red."

Dead End

By Nelson Harding



"Dead End Alley" is that pathway,
Though it may be long and winding,
Narrowing until it reaches
One inevitable ending.

Crooked road that leads to murder,
And then to the final turning
Leading to that gloomy portal
And the journey's termination.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, Jan. 11—Dizzy Out in the 10th of my side to quest of scrapple for breakfast. And none available. Ike Vlesko came a box of Oregon pears and Walter Woods, the hotel man, in San Francisco, sent a box of apples. Lucius Beebe sent from his private pullman house, on I feasted on fruit.

At my task until Floyd Gibbons came in and left Bob Brinkerhoff and we gabbed of many things and sang some old minstrel songs, all very maley.

So with my belt to the John Goddess tea at the Gotha House. Cole and Gertie sat awhile with George and Carole Arnold.

Joined on a chunk of beef, cooked in cabbage and hot peppers, a recipe of Louis Bromfield's. Then to call on Charles and Kathleen Norris here from Carlsbad and home where the Boston "Nimble" had been on another rampage, pulling over a lamp and stood waiting at a closed door for punishment.

Peggy Joyce threatens suits the origins of pearls to become a star and 2 nude Waid in the art of creating young. There is a spark in Peggy's fervor, of course, between them, but La Joyce has retained the age which her longing to make at least slight imprint. Yet to appear-ances, she is the same peach-blow, pinkish and soft as a lynx, blonde she was 15 years ago. For at least 25 years she has been A gal who likes to go eafeing. Both here and abroad. And there has seldom been an evening she has not been out there at a front row table, dancing.

Fannie Ward, incidentally, seems permanently orientated to London. Her daughter is married to a noble and they live on a rather pretentious estate in Surrey. Miss Ward also remains unchanged. Looking the same as she has for a quarter century. She confesses to 65 with an arch quirk of smile. Some of the knowing lach on six years and say she is getting a break. She writes friends that young blades still make passes at her when she trips through various hotel foyers to afternoon teas. Only her hands are a giveaway, but they are always daintily gloved.

Economic note: Viola Rodgers, that beautiful repertoire, here on the Gotham Vodvil circuit, is on cast-iron in the curiosity shops because they are initialed V. R.

The late Samuel Merwin once lived in Evanston, Ill., and was related to Evanston's famed Frances Willard. Her house is still there, marked with a bronze tablet. She was said to refer to the place as "Heavenston" and Merwin, quite a traveler, always liked to tease about and praise it as one of the finest specimens of American suburbia. Club women have much to do with the town's municipal government and often pass unusual ordinances.

I recall Merwin telling of one that did not permit dogs to enter food stores, which as a dog lover I think is eminently proper. The owners who respects the rights of others abuses a privilege when he takes a dog to such places.

Underweight literary and artist fellows are inclined to emile in presence of athletes and it's often difficult to establish anything remotely resembling cordiality among them. A day one recent fall Hal Boumanadee, the hefty pitcher, dropped into the Dwiggins' camp upstate. Russ Cole, the cartoonist, not so hefty, was there and Cole confessed immediate and unreasonable dislike. And later at the Polo Grounds he saw Cole position the pitcher all over the lot and stood up and cheered.

Bagatelles. Billy Rose needs only four hours sleep to get along . . . Fourteen of Paul Whiteman's organization have become fathers of orchestras, radio and screen. . . . Tin Pan Alley is turning out a "Bowery" song in honor of Mrs. Simpson's pet name for Windsor . . . Charlie Chaplin, rumors gone, is thinking of a serious film role . . . Rob Davis is off for a tour of India and a visit to Ireland.

Charles Washburn, one of Broadway's crack press agents, had a lot of fun writing "Come Into My Parlor," a history of Chicago's disorderly resorts during the reign of the notorious Everleigh sisters, most spectacular chatelaines of clubs in American annals. Washburn dedicates his opus "To John Chapman, the columnist, who has never been in one."

Another publicist has attacked for a similar book on New York's infamous Hay Market. It was a wicked dance hive on 6th's corner where the knock-out drop was reputedly invented and where the bloods of the town drug girls in banoon cabs during the Gas Lit Era.

At dusk to see little old-fashioned Miss Armstrong whose jolly shop is at 174 9th avenue. A quaint talker from Pennsylvania, who jells and jars her own delicacies. In plain unlabeled jars. "I can't afford to have them painted," says she, adding impressively, "and haven't time to write them." Men like strawberry preserves best. Ladies, gooseberry and currant. She has 50 or so combinations. Branded oysters in stone pots. Lamb stew in glass jars. Cooks in her pin-neat kitchen in the rear. A happy, black-aproned woman. About 55, keen, gray, folksy. How she hates the El roaring overhead!

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

Every woman enjoys a wedding, even if she is only watching and mourns anew the misery of the promising one provided by her own FIFTH wedding.

For it's not until she's been married at least once or twice, that a woman really gets a definite "kick" out of the part of stellar role in a marriage ceremony.

At her first wedding a girl wears dainty white and insists upon having a train. She is afraid a wedding sheet, dragging behind her. But the next time she marries, the brightest use she makes of it by wearing something more cheerful, and she knows enough not to have any impediments for the bridegroom to stumble over and mortally injure himself before he reaches the altar.

At her first wedding a girl is suffer from stage-fright and self consciousness. She acts just a sleep-walker and can't tell you a thing about it afterward. A murderer on his own hanging is no nearer to being a corpse. They rarely should have an ambulance, instead of a limousine, to carry her away in.

But at her third wedding, her eyes are wide open—nothing escapes her from the flower-decked altar to the clergyman's words, and the dubious look in the best man's eye. She walks with a firm, assured step, and knows all her lines like a Broadway actress after a long run.

A first wedding must be all starlight and bells and dimsoon! And that's the best wedding!

A Famed Wax Museum

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

Marie Grosholtz saw the head of Marie Antoinette severed by the guillotine, drop into the grisly basket on the grisly platform. She saw Marat dead in his bathtub, murdered by Charlotte Corday. She had been called there to model his head, even as she had been at the guillotine to model the head of the hapless Antoinette.

That was her life work, and her particular forte during the French Revolution. She learned there the morbid fascination of the masses for the gruesome. She was to turn that knowledge into riches and fame.

Marie Grosholtz, born in Switzerland, was destined to marry a Frenchman named Tussaud. She found life with him unbearable, and fled to England with her children. First in Bristol and later in London she set about to earn a living by modeling wax models in wax of the celebrities of the Reign of Terror.

WALLY SIMPSON

Overnight Mme. Tussaud's Museum became as famous as the Tower of London or Westminster Abbey as a landmark in England. It has remained so for three generations, and a hundred years, and no tourist to John Bull's tight little isle would think of visiting it without a visit to the waxworks on Baker street, the same street Sherlock Holmes lived and worked.

A few days ago Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, of Baltimore and London, was admitted to the august and horrible company under the Tussaud roof. She stands there, life-size in a velvet evening gown. She holds a dark vanity bag in her right hand, raised to the level of the waist. A jeweled bracelet is on the right wrist and a ring with a large stone graces a finger of the left hand.

Mme. Tussaud lived to be 90 and has been gone those 87 years. But her sense of the dramatic and of the timely still persists in the management of the museum. The Tussaudite gentleman by profession have practiced the preaching of Madame Marie, that to keep ahead of competitors one only had to keep up to the minute. Hence Mrs. Simpson in wax is on exhibition before the ink has dried upon the document of the King's abdication.

I do not know the new Tussaud Museum, although they tell me it is pretty much the same as the one which was destroyed by fire on March 18, 1925. That was a night similar to the one which London experienced last month when the famous Crystal Palace burned to the ground. Practically all the notables went the way of all wax when attacked by fire—Jack Dempsey, Rudolph Valentine, Henry VIII, Pershing, Hindenberg, George, Bernard Shaw, Mary, Queen of Scots and 200 others—reduced to a mass of molten tallow.

Destroyed, too, were the coach that carried Napoleon in his retreat from Moscow, the barouche he used on St. Helena and the flag carried on the return from Elba.

SHE KNEW NAPOLEON

Mme. Tussaud had known Bonaparte and ever was on the alert to buy replicas of his regime. The Duke of Wellington knew him also and was a regular visitor to the museum. However, it is doubtful that Sir Arthur was as interested in the memorabilia of his opponent at Waterloo as he was in the reproductions of famous criminals.

After all, it was not the great men and the great women of history that made Mme. Tussaud's. It was the hot news displayed in the Chamber of Horrors. Most of these survived the fire because they were kept in an underground basement. Fortunately, the molds were kept there, too, which simplified the work of rebuilding the population of the museum.

In that Chamber of Horrors, for which there was once a reward of £500 for anyone who would spend a night there alone, I was impressed most by the figure of Dr. Hawley Harvey Crippen, which was a tribute to give you the creeps, even in wax. A mouse-like man with sparse hair, a bulging forehead, eyeglasses, he sat there with clasped hands, the very personification of repentance.

MURDERER'S STORY

I imagine, however, that the association of this figure with his real-life butcher is what makes it so loathsome. Very lately in real life, before the murder in 1910, one would have passed by Dr. Crippen on the street and called him as an insignificant nobody.

Bernard Tussaud, present director of the museum, says that he is going to concentrate only on the very best murderers, historical subjects. "Which, while they should still make the shivers run up one's spine, will, at least, have some educational value."

I do good to know that Dr. Crippen will not lose his place. The Tussauds say they have grown too much accustomed to him to melt him.

Back Home.

DEAR FOLKS:

Say, if you could of saw the boat which brung me over to Europe, where I am now at, you would know that the Homan Race has went soft.

She was the biggest thing in the way of boats, except one of the Empire State Bldg. but not as many windows and the way they treat some fares you'd think it your old Grandma over in her grave.

When your and my Grandma come over to the U. S. A. from the Old Country, she wore a handkerchief on her head and a couple of brats in each hand. They put her in a thing called Steerage, which was a sort of Sardine Can with 48 people in it. They et wooly beef for 20 days, and they was sea-sick in 45 different languages.

Well, I just come out of Modesty Steerage, and this is what we Emigrants had. We had radios, a orchestra, 5 meals per day, cashs which is like a orgin hotel room, people to wait on you Hand and Foot.

Some of old Grandma's grandaughters was on board, just going to Europe for the buggy ride. They was complaineding very loud, on acct. they had to have a different party-dress for dassing on the boat every night, the Permanent Waver wasen't a Frenchman like they hoped, and if the Elevaters wasen't running, they had to walk up to the next deck on their hind legs.

My golly, if Columbus had of started out in the Seagoin Luxury we got now, he wouldent never of discovered Amerika. He would of been too busy in the Shop's Saloon seeking if Mrs. Isabella Grand Widdow in a low-sining Evening Gown.

Maybe it would of been just as good if Columbus would of discovered us, the way we have went fiooey. So if anybody says that from Moscow, the barouche he used on St. Helena and the flag carried on the return from Elba.

Yours till soon,
WINSTON NORMAN.

Isn't It So?

After a girl has married a man and tried cooking for him for a while, she soon discovers that the way through his stomach does not lead to his heart, but to his liver-complaint.

Sometimes a woman envies her husband's watch. He treats it so gently and tenderly, takes it with him wherever he goes, and never admits it is WRONG!
